Mussolini Answers Three Criticism Made Against
His Regime

REPLY BID FOR BACKING

U. S. Now Anxious to Know
If Franco-Italian Row
Will Be Ended

BY DAVID LAWRENCE
Copyright 1931 by Post Pub. Co.

Washington (CPA)—The most important international event of the new year was the speech of Premier Mussolini of Italy. It was important not so much because of what the Italian leader said but because of the impression which he was plainly trying to erase from the minds of other peoples.

Three separate criticisms have been made of Italian policies under Mussolini. First, that Italy was developing an empire with Soviet Russia. Second, that France and Italy were drifting apart because of rivalry on naval building. Third, a general policy of isolation on the part of Italy as against a program of cooperation with the other nations of Europe.

The Italian premier struck at each one of these criticisms in his speech openly taking cognizance of them by declaring that Fascism had nothing in common with Communism, that Italy was not warlike and that he himself regarded the last war as too horrible to be repeated.

"Italy never will take the initiative in starting a war," said the premier. "Italy needs peace, Fascism desires to secure for the Italian people, in cooperation with all other peoples of the world, a future of prosperity and peace."

Little Belligerency

Signor Mussolini has rarely delivered a speech with less belligerency in it when discussing foreign affairs. There is no doubt that the economic situation in Italy has caused the change in tone. Perhaps the most significant paragraph in the premier's speech was the following: "We cannot conceive modern history without the United States. History not brought forth a formidable weight to bear on the situation—moved mainly by idealistic motives—the war would not have been won. Without their cooperation the world cannot recover from the post war crisis. Their help is necessary if prosperity is to return."

The meaning of the foregoing is that Italy looks to the United States to help her adjust her financial and economic problems. Large sums have already been loaned to companies in Italy by American investors and there is talk of a huge loan for the Italian government. Count Volpi, Italian financial expert, has recently visited the United States and probably reported on the state of public opinion. Unless there is a more favorable impression of Italian foreign policies the flotation of a loan would naturally be difficult. Also the American government is very much interested in whether Signor Mussolini and Foreign Minister Briand of France can get together and straighten out the differences which prevented France and Italy from signing the London naval treaty. The signing of the treaty, which would probably have a profound effect here in confirming the friendly tenor of Signor Mussolini's New Year's message.

Rebels entered the palace over a balcony of an adjoining house surprised the guards, and made a prisoner of President Don Florencio Arosemena. Arias will remain provisional chief until Dr. Ricardo J. Alfaro, at present minister to the United States, arrives home from Washington to assume office as president.

NEW REGIME IN PANAMA ACTS TO RESTORE ORDER

Minister at Washington Accepts Post as Nation's President

Washington (P)—Secretary Stimson indicated today the state department would refrain from any immediate decision on recognition of a new administration in Panama. Similarly, the question of the recognition of Guatemala will be delayed pending receipt of further information as to the constitutionality of the regime of Provisional President Andrade.

Panama City (P)—Panama, its government overthrown in a brief revolution which brought death to ten persons, today awaited the turn of its new president-designate, Dr. Don Ricardo A. Alfaro, minister at Washington. Dr. Alfaro came from Washington to assume office as president.

Meanwhile a provisional government, headed by Dr. Harmodio Arias, a leader of the isthmian republic's young bloods, acted to restore order throughout the country, arresting the leading figures of the old regime and seeking in pronouncements to allay public fears of further violence.

Florencia Harmodio Arosemena, who yesterday resigned the presidency he had held since 1925, was confined to his quarters with other government officials, including Archibaldo Boyd, governor of the province of Panama. It was believed that he will be released shortly unless it is decided to hold him for trial on charges of malfeasance.

The revolt flared at about 2:30 a. m. yesterday and before noon the old government had been completely overthrown and the foundation laid for establishment of a new one. Of the ten dead, eight were members of the police or national constabulary and two were civilians. Fifteen persons were wounded.

American Wounded
One of the most seriously wounded was an American, Hartwell F. Ayers, newspaper man of Aniston, Ala., who was shot in the neck and abdomen, near the presidential palace, and lay behind its walls for an

"ABDUCTED" BANKER MUST FACE CHARGES

Accused of Conspiracy to Embezzle $10,000 of Institution's Funds

Chicago (P)—John E. Malloy, assistant cashier of the Lawrenceville National bank whose story of being kidnapped by bank robbers led to the closing of the institution, was charged with conspirator to embezzle $10,000 of the bank's funds in a warrant issued today by United States Commissioner Edwin K. Walker.

Malloy appeared in the Milwaukee police station New Year's night and said he had just been released by four men who robbed the Chicago bank of about $12,000 and then kidnapped him.

The bank was closed yesterday pending an investigation of the cashier's story and a checkup of funds. Negotiations for a merger with another bank also were suspended, partly because the time lock on the vault had been set for tomorrow so that the funds could not be worked over.

Another action against Malloy appeared possible when David Glick, a depositor, announced he would ask for an embezzlement warrant in municipal court Monday.

RUHR VALLEY COAL MINE DISPUTE QUIETING DOWN

Essen, Germany (P)—The situation was quiet today in the Ruhr valley coal mines, where a group of so-called radical workers walked out yesterday in protest against a proposed reduction in wages.

Man And Woman Take Off For Paris In Monoplane Carrying Pay-Load Cargo

BULLETIN
S. S. Bermuda (P)—The monoplane, Tradewind, attempting a payload flight from New York to Paris, passed over the steamship Bermuda at 10:30 a. m. E. S. T. flying low and fast. The plane was heading southeast in latitude 35 53 and longitude 63 45, about 370 miles southeast of Ambrose light. Weather conditions were perfect.

New York (P)—A red-haired widow and the man who taught her to fly pointed the plane "Tradewind" for Paris in hazy darkness early today, setting their sights for Bermuda and the Azores with a payload.

Mrs. Beryl Hart, one of the few women to hold an unlimited transport license, and Lieut. William S. MacLaren, former navy flier, took off from the Glenn H. Curtiss seaplane in Queen at 5:50 A. M., circled the field several times in the glare of searchlights and headed over Manhattan, finally roaring away toward the tip of Long Island.

Several minutes later an escort plane, occupied by W. D. Campbell, E. M. Smith and C. J. Strickland, friends of the pilots, followed them into the air, intending to accompany them several hundred miles.

Lieut. MacLaren was at the controls on the getaway but Mrs. Hart was expected to replace him soon after the start and do the bulk of the piloting. Both were dressed in spottless aerial togs, unsoiled by the grime of land take-offs, and Mrs. Hart wore a five leaf clover, a rabbit's foot and an Indian penny as emblems of good luck.

Considering the early hour, a fair-sized crowd was present to wish them bon voyage. Mrs. Cora Mansfield, mother of Mrs. Hart, and Mrs. George Gwynne, her sister, were on hand, as well as department of commerce inspectors and flying friends from Newark, N. J., and Jersey City.

The pilots planned to cut southeast over the Atlantic and land at Hamilton, Bermuda at 1:30 (E. S. T.) this afternoon, a distance of 650 miles. Resting three hours while the plane was turned up and refueled, they hoped to resume the flight about sunset and make Horta, Azores, in 21 hours, traveling 2,042 miles. They figured the last lap to Paris, 1,520 miles, would take them 17 1/2 hours, setting them down on the River Seine, within the "Elly" limits, in less than 60 hours.

They carried with them a chart of the Seine, drawn by Deudonne Coste after he and Maurice Bellonte had landed here on their Paris-New York flight. In case the river traffic is too heavy, they will come down on a small lake just outside the city.

When a desire to prove that ocean flying can be put on a paying commercial basis, the pilots loaded the "Tradewind" with about 250 pounds of mail and foodstuffs, the first cargo load to be started across the Atlantic. The mail was cleared out of New York and was destined for stamp collectors along the way.

Their ship is a black and white Bellanca monoplane, similar in construction to the Columbia which twice conquered the Atlantic. It is powered with a 300-horsepower Wright, whirlwind motor and is equipped with pontoons for water landings. Its tanks have a capacity of 400 gallons of gasoline but only 250 gallons were aboard at the start. They carried no radio.

BURMANS AND CHINESE IN DESPERATE RIOTING

Rangoon, Burma (P)—This city was thrown into turmoil today by furious rioting between Burmans and Chinese armed with stones, whips, clubs and knives.

The police finally had to fire on the rioters when other efforts to restore peace had proved unavailing. Fifteen persons are believed to have been killed or injured in the fighting which caused suspension of all traffic in the streets. Stores were closed and hotel doors barred.

Although there was some futile communal strife yesterday today's riots had a particular ferocity which police found hard to combat. Mounts of police galloping through the fighters were unable to disperse them.

CAUGHT IN AVALANCHE

Glarus, Switzerland (P)—A party of 15 German skiers was swept away yesterday by an avalanche on a mountain slope near Elm. Thirteen of the party were killed and two were rescued.

3 KILLED IN WRECK

Carlisle, England (P)—Three persons were killed and twelve injured when the noon express from Edinburgh to London jumped a switch near here today and rolled down an embankment.

FLAMES CAUSE $20,000 LOSS; CAUSE UNKNOWN

Postoffice, Bakery and Restaurant Are Burned to Ground

Fire of unknown origin early Saturday morning swept through the business section of the village of Hilbert, razing the postoffice, the Sanitary Bakery, and the Elite restaurant on Main-st.

The loss was fixed at between $15,000 and $20,000, partially covered by insurance. The bakery loss was estimated at $10,000, while the loss in the postoffice and restaurant was placed at $5,500 to $6,000.

An alarm was sent to the Chilton fire department, which joined the forces of the Hilbert department to battle the flames. Handicapped by a scarcity of water, firemen were kept on the scene until late Saturday morning. The flames were discovered about 2 o'clock this morning.

Every available source of water was utilized, including the depot water tank of the Chicago, Milwaukee, St. Paul and Pacific railroad company, and private wells.

Four streams of water and three chemical lines were employed on the flames. Two trucks were sent from Chilton upon receipt of a telegram from Hilbert, which in less than a half hour was without telephone service.

The lead line of the Wisconsin Telephone Co., which ran through a transformer in front of the restaurant, was destroyed, cutting off all telephone communication in the western part of the village.

Joseph Plummer, who operated the Elite restaurant, his family, and nearby neighbors were awakened by an explosion in the restaurant. The cause of the explosion had not been ascertained Saturday.

In a few moments the restaurant was filled with smoke, and Mr. Plummer summoned the department. The flames spread rapidly, aided by a stiff southwest wind.

The three wooden frame buildings were soon enveloped in a mass of flames and firemen found it difficult to fight them due to the intense heat. They played one stream of water on the Joseph McGraw jewelry store, which was separated from the other three buildings by an alley.

The sides of the store were scorched and the windows cracked by hot incense heat.

Postal employees managed to carry all of the equipment and most of the mail to safety. It is believed the only mail destroyed was a few letters in the private boxes of patrons.

The Sanitary bakery was owned and operated jointly by John Puzerberger and Albert Strober, both of Hilbert. The second floor of the bakery building was unoccupied.

Most of the equipment, including machinery, and a large supply of baked goods, was lost.

The building in which the restaurant was located was owned by the Zimmer estate of Hilbert.

A temporary postoffice has been set up in the 11th building on Main-st. Equipment was moved into the building Saturday morning. A child's baby carriage was found in the building with baked foods at the Dick-Hornbeck general store, until the Puzerberger shop is rebuilt.

Mr. Plummer has not decided whether he will rebuild.

MINER KILLED, 4 HELD UNDER GROUND IN OHIO

Midvale, Ohio (P)—One miner was reported to have been killed, four were entombed and 15 others escaped today when an explosion occurred in mine No. 4 of the Midvale Coal company near here. Reports from the mine were to the effect that rescue workers had recovered the body of Clyde Oltner.

All available ambulances from Dover, New Philadelphia, Uhrichsville and Denison were rushed to the mine. Officials of the mine said only five men were in the workings at the time of the blast.

The cause of the explosion was not immediately a certain. About 20 men were working in the mine at the time of the explosion. All of them were able to flee to the outside except the five.

Officials said they did not know whether the four trapped men were alive or dead.

The shaft near the entrance was filled with persons as they tried to penetrate except with gas masks. Volunteer rescuers did not go through it.

RANGER SENATORS HOME
Madison (P)—Senators Robert M. La Follette and John E. Blaine, and their wives, arrived here last night from Washington to attend the inauguration of Gov. Edgar A. Snodgrass. They will return to the capital immediately after the inaugural ceremonies in order to be present when congress reconvenes after the Christmas recess.

French Hero Dies

Seek Added Data About Vote Funds

Washington (P)—More light on both the source of funds and the origin of literature used in a Republican campaign against re-election of Senator Norris of Nebraska, will be sought next Tuesday by the senate campaign funds committee.

Robert H. Lucas, executive director of the Republican national committee, who paid for the literature, was greeted as he reached the city by train last night with a subpoena to appear at the Tuesday hearing.

Chairman Nye also has summoned Joseph H. Nutt, treasurer of the national committee. He is to be asked the original source of a special $50,000 bank account of the Republican organization. This fund was pledged as security for a $4,000 loan to Lucas, about $500 of which he said was spent for anti-Norris publicity.

Through examination of records of the Independent Publishing company of this city the committee will seek to establish whether any link existed between the Ku Klux Klan and the anti-Norris efforts.

Officers of the company, which publishes the pro-Klan Fellowship Forum, have testified before the Nye committee that part of the campaign literature purchased from them by Lucas for an anti-Norris drive was the same used against Alfred E. Smith, Democratic presidential candidate, in 1928.

Both Lucas and Nutt, however, have denied any connection with efforts to inject the "religious issue" in the Nebraska senatorial contest.

Saw Death Approach
At 7 o'clock a. m., today Dr. Fontaine, feeling the pulse of the dying marshal, became convinced that death could be a question of only a very short period of time. Urgent telephone messages were sent to the family and friends and members of the general staff who gathered about the bed.

Mrs. Joffre knelt beside the recumbent form of her husband and Chaplain Bellefleur administered absolution at 8 o'clock a. m. went quietly and knelt in a corner of the room, still murmuring his prayers for the dying. Dr. Fontaine continued to hold the wrist of the marshal.

Slowly he counted the pulsations and then aided a solemn hush, broken only by the priest's frequent intonements, the marshal's great heart beat swiftly and then stopped altogether. This time there was no mistaking the end. It was death itself.

The marshal's face took on its customary serenity, lying white and placid upon the pillow. The deep lines which marked it like some map of battle, however, were ample evidence of the effects of the great battle the marshal had fought, his last earthly conflict.

Plan National Funeral
Marshal Joffre will be buried in a national funeral as elaborate as that tendered his illustrious colleague, Marshal Foch, but his body will not lie in state under the Arc de Triomphe, for the marshal himself had said he did not wish to be the cause of his troops and the people of Paris risking their health in the Paris winter to do him honor.

The cabinet arranged the funeral services at a special session this morning and it was decided that while he was still alive the marshal had expressed a desire to be buried at Louveciennes, his country home. It was not known whether he had made any such specific directions in a will.

Jervis Buchanan, minister of war and a close friend of the marshal, turned to page 7 col. 5

DEATH DEFEATS MARNE HERO IN GRIM STRUGGLE

Marshal Who Turned Back Germans Fails to Come Out of Coma

PLAN NATIONAL RITES
Only Three of Great Military Leaders During War Still Living

Paris (P)—Death came today to Marshal Joffre, last of the chief French military leaders of the great war, after a fortnight's illness in which it was necessary to amputate his left leg. The marshal would have been 79 years old tomorrow.

The end was expected. These members of his family, Mme. Joffre, his son-in-law, M. Langle and his brother, Ferdinand, General Issaly, his chief of staff, Colonel Desmazes of his staff, his doctors and a few others were present. He died without coming out from the coma which closed over him at noon Thursday, his life gradually ebbing since.

The announcement was made at 3:30 a. m. A member of his military household, Captain Saint-Cernin, pale with emotion, emerged from the hospital and in a hush, voice telling newspapermen: "The marshal is dead, gentlemen." He displayed a bulletin signed by the physicians, Professor Lerche and Drs. Boulin and Fontaine, which set the end at 8:23 a. m.

Shortly afterward Professor Lerche, Strasbourg specialist who came to Paris to treat the wound which finally cut the marshal's life short, appeared and informing the newspapermen of the circumstances of death, added that the marshal had been in a state of coma practically all this week except for rare intervals of five or ten minutes lucidity.

Large Crowd Present
Despite the early hour a crowd already had assembled outside the hospital Saint Jean de Dieu, where the marshal had been confined for two weeks. When information of the death was passed to the newspapermen the word "mort"—death—passed through the crowd. Men bared their heads and women made the sign of the cross.

The news spread rapidly through Paris, where death had been expected for more than a week. Bells tolled and official circles made preparations for honors in death due the man who in 1914 turned the invaders back from the very gates of Paris in the epic battle of the Marne.

His death removes from the world stage all save three of the great military leaders of the World War. Field Marshal von Hindenburg and General Erich Ludendorff of Germany, and General John J. Pershing of the United States. Of the French leaders only Marshal Ferdinand Foch, victor of Verdun, still lives, but, unlike Foch or Joffre, he never was in supreme command of the French armies. One by one, Haig, Cadorna, Foch and others have passed from the scene.

AGAINST PLAN FOR DISPOSAL OF WHEAT

Unfavorable Report Submitted on Proposal of Senator Capper

Washington (P)—An unfavorable report on the proposal of Senator Capper, Republican, Kansas, to have the farm board distribute for relief purposes 40,000,000 bushels of surplus wheat it holds was made today by the senate agriculture committee.

Samuel McKelvie, wheat industry representative on the board, explained in a letter to Chairman McNary that the board was without authority to give away the wheat.

He said the board was anxious to cooperate for relief but that the members felt this should be done through the regular organized relief agencies.

"To give away the wheat," he wrote, "would impair the relieving fund of this board and use the money for purposes other than for which appropriated."

Town Of Oneida Indians Living In Destitute Circumstances

COMMITTEE IS ORGANIZED TO SECURE RELIEF

Contributions of Food and Clothing Sought for Suffering Red Men

BY H. K. DERUS

Have you ever lived for days at a time on a diet of wild potatoes and beans?

Have you ever been out of work, out of funds, with the necessity of supporting a large family?

Have you ever wondered where you could get shoes and stockings for your children and money to pay for them?

Have you ever been penniless in the middle of winter and wondered how you would be able to find enough firewood to keep your family from freezing?

Have you ever sat up all night stuffing old rags into cracks in the wall and holes in the windows and firing an old kitchen range, the only means of heat in a tiny ramshackle cabin, to keep out the penetrating icy winds which threatened the lives of your family?

Have you ever cleared land at $2 an acre . . . sometimes being able to clear as much as from a half to an acre a day?

Have you ever huddled around a tiny old broken down stove with your family, with some of the children turning bare feet to the cold to keep them warm, and wondered what you'd eat for your next meal?

If you have never done these things you can't even begin to realize the condition of 100 destitute Indian families in the town of Oneida.

Dates Back To Trade

The reason for this destitution goes back to the early part of the nineteenth century when a greedy government, anxious for the valuable lands on which the Indians lived in New York, succeeded in making a trade by which the Indians secured a plot of land in Wisconsin for the valuable property in New York state. They were sent to Wisconsin to take up residence on what used to be the Oneida reservation but now comprises the towns of Oneida, Outagamie-co, and Hobart, Brown-co.

But even here, on their government land, they were not free from the greedy and greedy whites. The Indians were continually urged to appeal to the government to "put them on their own," dissolve the reservation and parcel the lands among them. This the Indians finally did.

Dates and places aren't necessary to reveal this tale of a downtrodden people who have been misled out of their rightful heritage. However, for the skeptical, they are available. No sooner did the government release the Indians as their charges and given them title to the land than they became the easy prey of unscrupulous whites. There remains only a few thousand acres still in the possession of a few Indians who were a bit too shrewd for the land sharks.

Barely Exist

Since shortly after the beginning of the twentieth century these Indians have been living as they best can. Squatting on land which once had to mouth, raising large families and trying their best to imitate the whites, but failing miserably. Now there are some 300 men, women and children facing the prospect of starvation and freezing unless help comes at once.

The town of Oneida has depleted its treasury in extension of charity. The town will have no more funds available until the tax role is collected in March. Meanwhile, the Indians are suffering.

Pat M. Garvey, the town chairman, declared several days ago that the only thing keeping the Indians from actual starvation is the kindness of some of the town's storekeepers, who are risking their businesses in extending credit. Help is needed at once, Mr. Garvey said.

There are scores of instances in which families were found huddling about a dilapidated old iron stove, with the biting wind pouring through large cracks of their hovels. For firewood they are using bits of rotten logs and small pieces of trees which they have been able to salvage by scouring the woods. Indian boys and girls, three, four and five years old, were found sitting in the circle without shoes and stockings, their bare limbs stretched toward the heat for comfort.

Appeals To Government

Mr. Garvey petitioned the United States for $5,000 with which to care for the Indians. However, the chances for getting the money are almost hopeless, according to Congressman George J. Schneider. Mr. Schneider appeared to the Federal Indian bureau at Washington, D. C., but was told that there was no possibility of securing aid from that quarter. When the Indians petitioned for allotment of their lands they ceased being charges of the government and thereby lost all chance for aid. Mr. Schneider said there is just a bare possibility that Congress might pass a bill providing for an appropriation of $5,000 for the Indians but he feels the chances for this relief measure are but slim.

Were one to be granted, Mr. Schneider explained, there would be thousands of similar requests for help from every section of the country.

So the Indians are facing a dismal prospect. Their suffering will be all the more intense because they are far from the room in which charity is usually extended. A poor family or a score of poor families, in any city in the country would soon be given help because of their condition would be apparent to hundreds of people living near them. With these Oneida Indians it is different. They are living in rude huts, hovels and

ESCORT ACCOMPANIES VAUDEVILLIANS HERE

An escort of city officials will accompany George K. Arthur and Karl Dane when they arrive at George A. Whiting Airport here tomorrow from Green Bay to appear in vaudeville at the Fox theatre. The escort will include Charles D. Thompson, president of the common council, representing Mayor John Goodland; George T. Prim, chief of police, and Mayor George Sande of Neenah.

The party will arrive in a sister ship of Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis."

shacks far from well traveled roads. For this reason their condition is not likely to become known.

Scores of instances can be given to illustrate the dire need and pitiful condition of the Indians, living in rude shelters which would scarcely be used for sheds in the city. A few outstanding examples will be noted merely to give an idea of the conditions.

12 In One Hut

Simon Jordan and his wife, with their 10 tiny children, are living in a small shack which could scarcely be described as a home. Both Mr. and Mrs. Jordan are blind. They are depending on help from outside for food, and on whatever wood their oldest children can pick up in the woods for warmth.

"Peggy" Archquette, with his wife and six children, live but a short distance away. They are in a fairly comfortable circumstances, compared with some of the places in the neighborhood, but should there be a heavy storm this family would be stranded. The father, who hobbles about on a "peg" leg, would be unable to make his way through deep snow and the children are too small to be trusted far from the home to gather firewood. Even if they were, they haven't the proper clothing for a trip through the icy winds. Not even warm shoes and stockings.

A little further on is a rude hut, about 10 feet square, with attic. Two windows, so-called, are to be seen, but one is entirely boarded over to take the place of the glass, long since broken. Glass is expensive and cannot be purchased when there is no money. The little shack is dark and gloomy inside. There is a rusty lantern hanging from a hook in the ceiling but this cannot be burned very much because of cost. A cracked cook stove stands in one corner. This is used for cooking as well as for heating the place. A few dirty blankets on the single bed, a small table and a broken chair comprise the furnishings. The six children sleep on the floor of the small cubby-hole attic with scarcely enough covering to keep them warm. Someone must sit up all night and keep putting wood on the fire so that some degree of warmth is maintained in the dingy hut which houses nine people.

Man Clears Land

Here comes an Indian, walking slowly down the road through the biting wind with a hatchet. It is dusk and he says he is returning from a plot of brush land a mile away where he is clearing the land at $2 an acre. It is possible, he says, if he has good luck, to clear an acre in a day. The money is certainly welcome. Mr. Webster is fortunate. He has a wife and only two children dependent on him for support.

Perhaps one of the most touching cases is that of the family of William Cornelius, an elderly Indian who is partially blind and paralyzed. He and his wife and six children live in a rough board shack, with a broken down semblance of a porch. Inside is the usual rickety table, two beds, a tiny attic, a broken mirror, a few dishes and a rusty old stove. From the doorway of a dilapidated shed, a short distance away, peers a tiny Indian boy, shyly looking at the visiting whites. He has moccasins on his feet but no stockings. Tiny overalls, tattered and torn, do not protect his legs from the icy wind and he is shivering when he enters the house and goes to the stove to get warm. "What have we to eat?" Well, some potatoes and a few beans. "Almost all gone though, and we don't know where or how we are going to get more unless the town can help us."

Then there is William Meixson with his wife and 11 children, the oldest a girl 17 and the youngest a tiny baby. Two of the children huddle close to the old heater without shoes or stockings on. Another has a pair of baby worn tennis shoes on his feet, no stockings, and his toes are protruding. The cracks in the walls of the home and holes in the windows are stuffed with old rags, which partly served to help keep out the cold.

Committee Seeks Aid

Charles Cornelius, a World war veteran, with his wife and nine children, is living in poverty that is almost unbelievable.

A committee composed of John E. Hantschel, county clerk; Fred V. Heinemann, county judge; Congressman Schneider and F. M. Appleton, highway commissioner, has volunteered service to help secure relief. They are asking for donations of food and clothing which are to be delivered to Mr. Hantschel at his office at the courthouse. These will be taken to the home of Mr. Garvey, the town chairman. Mr. Garvey and the town's two superintendents, Joseph Cornelius and Fred Hall, will take charge of distributing the materials to the needy families.

One of the first donations announced by the committee was that from Mike Mack, Shiocton, chairman of the county board, who has offered several tons of cabbage. However, the committee needs a truck to get the cabbage to the reservation, and it is seeking a trucking company to volunteer its services. The committee will take old clothing, flour, canned goods, potatoes, vegetables and anything else which it can secure to help these Indians.

NEW REGIME IN PANAMA ACTS TO RESTORE ORDER

hour before being discovered and taken to the Gorges hospital. Despite his cheerfulness, his physicians believe he will die.

In the confusion which attended the revolt there was an erroneous report that Ayers had died in the hospital despite an emergency operation. Subsequently it developed that he had survived and that there was a slim chance of his recovery.

In the first stages of the revolt some surprise was expressed that American troops quartered in the Canal Zone were not brought in to maintain order, but with quickly returning normalcy the policy of the United States minister, Roy T. Davis, not to call upon the troops until absolutely necessary was seen generally as amply justified. Mr. Davis, in shirt sleeves and with open collar, was in constant touch with the situation but would say nothing of the diplomatic corps were "observing events."

In view of past difficulties involved in obtaining recognition of de facto Central American governments the revolutionaries, who principally are members of the youthful political reform organization, Accion Comunal, took great care to preserve constitutional forms in their designation as Dr. Alfaro as new president. Before resigning Dr. Arosemena, whose surrender had been coerced at the point of a riot machine gun, replaced Daniel Ballen as secretary of government and justice by Dr. Arias. Upon his resignation the supreme court took charge of the situation according to law and at 5 o'clock p. m. swore in Dr. Arias as provisional president.

Illegality Alleged

The invitation to Dr. Alfaro was extended on the ground that the three vice presidents of the Alfaro regime were illegally elected and that therefore Alfaro, first vice president in the preceding administration, was the logical successor to the president resigned. Cablegrams received early today from Washington announced Dr. Alfaro's acceptance of the call.

Dr. Arias appointed a provisional cabinet containing the following names:

Foreign minister—Francisco Arias Parades.

Finance—Enrique Jimenez.

Public instruction—Dr. Ramon Mora.

Under-secretary of state—Dr. J. J. Vallarino.

Secretary-general of the president's office—Victor F. Goytia.

Shortly after being sworn in Dr. Alfaro called upon Minister Davis to inform him of the development and in a statement to American newspapermen said: "I am sorry that this has happened but it was forced upon the people and upon me. I don't want the job and I assure you that I won't have it long, but the people have faith in me and I will carry out their wish."

Police Kept at Colon

The greatest opposition to the new regime developed in Colon, at the opposite side of the isthmus, where the governor, Innocencio Galindo, was arrested last night with his subordinates. They will be held until they resign and a new government is established. Galindo yesterday attempted to move 500 police to Panama to aid in suppression of the revolt but the isthmian railroad refused to carry the men. The Colon citizenry was described as excited but with no trouble in prospect.

RECOVER AUTOMOBILE STOLEN IN MENASHA

Menasha—An automobile stolen from T. W. Orison, Appleton, early Friday evening, was recovered by Menasha police shortly after midnight Saturday morning on highway 114 near the city limits. ## TWO BULLETS FIRED INTO DOOR OF HOUSE

Menasha—That two bullets were fired through the front door of the Frank L. Wippich residence on Appleton-st. on New Year's Eve was the report received at the Menasha police station Friday afternoon. The slugs were apparently fired from a heavy calibre revolver, but investigation by Mr. Wippich failed to reveal anyone in the vicinity. It is believed the shots were fired by some careless reveller.

Sports Editor Gets The Low Down On "Big Fight"

Dear Boss:

When in the course of human events it becomes necessary for one reporter to cover another reporter's run he oftentimes finds things that he isn't entirely acquainted with.

Now last evening we noticed the Cub Reporter had another spasm and sat down in front of a typewriter to laboriously pound out what looked like a real masterpiece. It was so full of mistakes and mis-cues that I'm really surprised the linotype operators could read it. The boys over at the fire department (you remember the story was about two of their members) are pretty good at cribbage and therefore they were able to figure out what the Cub wanted to say.

His yarn was that Nick Klein, or Klinker, or something like that, was going to fight Blondy Hillman in the biggest sporting event of the season, bigger even than that proposed bout in New York between Max Schmeling and Young Stribling. This morning, however, it develops that the fight won't come off, to-night. Blondy Hillman it seems, has assumed he's the champ over there at the fire station and has accordingly taken a champion's prerogative.

GUARDSMEN TO ATTEND NORMAN KUHR RITES

A uniformed detail from Co. D, 127th Infantry, Wisconsin National Guard, will act as bearers and will make up a firing squad at the funeral of Norman E. C. Kuhr, Menasha, who died Thursday night of injuries received when struck down by an automobile. The detail will be composed of non-commissioned officers of the company and will leave Army Co. at 12:30 o'clock Sunday afternoon. Kuhr had been a member of the company for the last six months.

Other members of Co. D, who wish to attend the funeral have been asked by Capt. Clyde P. Schroeder to be at the Army at 12:30 o'clock. They will not be asked to wear uniforms.

CHARGES DISMISSED AGAINST EARL WOODIN

Charges against Earl Woodin, truck driver, that he brought a load of Christmas trees into Appleton from Black Creek after they had been cut without the owner's consent, were dropped in municipal court Saturday morning when the complaining witness failed to appear. Motion to dismiss was made by District Attorney Stanley A. Staley.

Woodin was arrested with Gus Misterek, Appleton, several weeks ago. Misterek was fined $25 and costs.

MAN INJURED WHEN HIT BY AUTOMOBILE

Schulze was attempting to cross the street from north to south at 510 W. College-ave. Wolf was driving west on the avenue. Wolf took the injured man to St. Elizabeth hospital.

JUMPS ARTERIAL

Ira Sienert, 522 N. Toukasi-st, was met 51 and cowed in municipal court Saturday morning when he pleaded guilty of jumping an arterial highway sign at the corner of N. Oneida-st. and E. Wisconsin-ave. The arrest was made by Officer Behrend.

NOTABLES PAY THEIR TRIBUTE TO MARNE HERO

Hoover, Pershing, King George Express Sympathy to French People

Washington—President Hoover cabled to President Demergue of France today his personal and the official condolences of the American people on the death of Marshall Joffre. The message said:

"I am distressed by the news of the death of Marshall Joffre who is so affectionately remembered by the American people. Both in their name and personally I wish to express to your excellency the deep sorrow which is felt in this country at the passing of this great patriot."

Secretary Stimson instructed the embassy in Paris to convey a message of sympathy on behalf of the American government and the secretary himself to the French minister of foreign affairs.

"I join in your sorrow and that of the French people," it read, "at the death of Marshall Joffre who was so well known and loved in this country. Please accept this expression of condolence and deepest sympathy in your great loss on behalf both of this government and myself."

PERSHING'S MESSAGE

The former commander of the American armies in France, General John J. Pershing, today expressed deep sympathy over the death of his former comrade, Marshall Joffre. In a message to Minister of War Barthou, he said:

"In the death of Marshal Joffre the world loses one of its outstanding military figures and France a devoted patriot. His conduct of operations as commander-in-chief of the French armies from the beginning of the World war to the end of 1918 was characterized by great leadership. He had unlimited confidence in the French soldier and knew how to appeal to his patriotism."

"As 'the rock of the Marne' he saved the allies from defeat. Under the most trying circumstances he never lost his calm demeanor."

"He had a deep friendship for America. My association with him was always most delightful. I was honored to call him my friend. His passing leaves me with a keen sense of personal loss."

KING MOURNS DEATH

London—King George today sent the following message of sympathy for Marshall Joffre's death to President Demergue of France:

"I join with my people in expressing heartfelt sympathy in the death of Marshall Joffre. The sad news will arouse feelings of sorrow, especially in those countries which in 1914 were allied to France."

"We shall mourn the close of the life of him who in those momentous days was called the supreme commander of the great French army with which for four long years the forces of the British empire were comrades in arms."

"I treasure the memory of meetings with Marshall Joffre on the occasion of my several visits to the front. Please convey to Madame Joffre and the marshal's relatives my most heartfelt sympathy."

TRIBUTE FROM DAWES

Paris—(AP)—Bogardus General Charles G. Dawes, ambassador at London, who was associated with Marshall Joffre during the war as a member of the A. E. F., today expressed his regrets at passing of his old comrade in arms. General Dawes was one of the last persons to see the marshal alive.

"Associated with the name of Marshall Joffre," he said, "are some of the most poignant and glorious memories of the allied cause. The great events of the war focus themselves upon individuals and in times of crisis such men find their way through the darkest and most distressed humanity to a lasting memory."

"Their qualities become known as those of no others and it is a tribute to Marshall Joffre that to general admiration is added a deep affection. Calmness, modesty, determination and devotion to his cause ever characterized him. With such qualities, unshaken against the vast background of the Marne he personified and fulfilled the allied hopes. Marshall Joffre becomes one of the world's immortals."

Sincerely yours,
The Sports Editor

CAR BADLY DAMAGED AS IT STRIKES POLE

An automobile owned and driven by Wheaton Goss, 501 W. Winnebago-st, was wrecked about 7:15 Friday evening when it crashed into a telephone pole on Highway 41 about a half mile east of the city limits of Appleton. Goss and two companions, who were on their way to a Kaukauna basketball game, escaped with a severe shaking up. According to the driver, the machine skidded on the pavement, turned into a ditch on the left side of the road, and then crashed into the pole.

At 6 o'clock Saturday morning the mercury registered 24 degrees above zero.

WATER COMMISSION REVIEWS REPORTS

Monthly reports were received and plans discussed at a meeting of the water commission in the city hall Friday afternoon. The commission also decided to reimburse the Furman Canning Co. for half of the water lost through a leak on the inside of a meter during a cyclone last year.

GUY MARSTON LAYS CLAIM TO TOUGHEST AUTO IN APPLETON

Guy Marston, 121 E. Kimball-st, believes he owns the toughest car in Appleton. In fact he believes it is second to nothing less than an army tank.

He became convinced of the car's soundness at 3 o'clock Friday afternoon when the machine dropped off the concrete platform in the rear of his garage, ran down a steep grade about 80 feet long, dropped over a 12 foot retaining wall on E. Water-st, landing on a machine owned by Alvin Dedeckeb, 1103 W. Packard-st, and then crashed into the iron fence which borders the canal near the Fox River Paper mill.

The car came through unscathed with the exception of a slightly bent fender, and cracked headlight, received when it struck the fence. Dedeckeb's car was demolished when the heavier machine dropped on top of it.

Mrs. Marston had driven the car out of the garage onto the platform and had gone into the house for a few minutes. She had failed to apply the emergency brakes.

LIVESTOCK CO-OP OPPOSES SHIPPING CATTLE BY TRUCK

Center Valley Association Elects Officers at Annual Meeting

BY W. F. WINSEY

Shipping livestock by truck from Outagamie county to terminal markets by farmers was condemned by speakers at the annual meeting of the Center Valley Cooperative Live Stock and Shipping Association at Center town hall Friday afternoon. It was argued that shipping by truck was the best method to break up a cooperative shipping association, thereby losing all the financial advantages gained by farmers through cooperative shipping.

A business and financial report was presented to the meeting by Gus J. Sedo, secretary from which it appeared that the association in the past year had shipped 37 carloads of livestock containing 66 head of cattle, 604 calves, 1,177 hogs and 7 sheep. For these animals the owners were paid $32,122.23. One hundred forty-eight head of cattle were in good standing in the association.

Fred Fiestedt was reelected president of the association; L. E. Nichols, vice president; Gus J. Sedo, secretary and treasurer; Leo Deffending, shipping manager; and Alfred Wirt, assistant shipping manager.

Directors elected are: William Volkman and William Klitzke, members of the auditing committee are Arthur Schroeder, Henry Holz and Chris Rath. The tellers were Alfred Wirt and Henry Lillge.

It was decided to turn 1 percent of the money received from sales into the sinking fund of the cooperative. Shipping livestock by freight will be continued by the association, and it at any time during the coming year it appears advisable to ship by truck the association will employ the truck.

In the discussion of trucking livestock to terminal markets the members who had experience said that livestock was not weighed before being loaded on a truck, that the owner knows nothing about the destination, grade and value of his animals at the time they leave the farm and is compelled to depend upon the report given him by the truck drivers on his return. On account of the truck the animals lose their appetites and considerable weight and are not in the best of condition at the end of the journey. The charge for a truck from Center Valley to Milwaukee is $40 and that of a freight car is $35. The freight rates are from 23 to 25 per hundred pounds and the truck rates are 60 cents per hundred pounds, declared some of the members. One-third of the livestock in the United States is marketed by farming cooperatives and the federal government and the Wisconsin department of markets is backing the cooperative marketing of livestock, and as the purpose of the truck is to break up cooperatives and to divert the shipments to favored commission houses, the Center Valley cooperative decided to continue shipping by rail.

MAN POSING AS DOCTOR FINED $425 AND COSTS

Sentence of One Year in State Prison Suspended for August Metchet

August Metchet, alias Jerry Metchet, Shiocton, was fined $425 in municipal court Saturday morning and sentenced to one year in state's prison when he pleaded guilty on two counts of practicing medicine without a license. The sentence, however, was suspended.

Metchet, arraigned before Judge Theodore Berg Friday afternoon, requested that a plea of guilty, entered at a previous arraignment, be changed to not guilty. The court denied the request, pointing out that the defendant was a mature man, that there was no evidence of duress on the part of officials.

He was fined $200 and sentenced to Waupun for one year on each of the two counts on which he was held. The sentences were to run concurrently. Saturday morning he paid the fine and costs and Judge Berg suspended the sentence.

Metchet was specifically charged with having treated William Koehnke, Sr., and Gregory Van Erm, both of the town of Grand Chute. The arrests followed a long investigation into the man's activity by Stanley Staloff, district attorney.

MARSHAL JOFFRE

Another of the titanic figures of a titanic struggle has passed over the bourn. Marshal Joffre fitted perfectly into the scheme of things for saving France in her greatest hour of need. He was the personification of quiet order, of relentless work, of fine, clear thinking, with the poise that could hearten a desperate country and compel it to coolly withdraw instead of impetuously striking before the time was ripe, and, indeed, when to strike would have been fatal.

He was, because of his thoroughness, democracy and kindly manner, immensely popular with the common soldier, the man who had to bare his breast to the waves of steel and lead. The popularity of a leader with his men is an invaluable asset, and one ordinarily appraised too low in the consideration of the many factors leading to ultimate success.

He has followed the route of many thousands of men who passed the gateway of death while under his military command. The fortunes of war decreed that for a time he should hold in the hollow of his hand the fate of these many thousands, and that it should be his command to attack, to "stand and fight," or to retreat that determined the time of their passing. Yet he was preserved to obey the orders of the all-powerful but unseen Commander.

The glory of victory and the plaudits of the world were his,—purchased by a holocaust of human destruction. Greed, lust for power, racial rivalries and national ideals drove men to battle and death, and brought him everlasting fame. The memory of his contemporaries in science, literature and the arts will grow dim, yet will his name resound even to that distant future when the period of the World War will be reckoned an early age in the history of the world.

Such are the records of history and the story of man's glorification of war.

In the appraisal of Joffre's military vision and genius the army tactician invariably turns to the "Miracle of the Marne." Like most miracles there was no miracle. There was only work, study, planning, judgment, supreme confidence. But all these were Joffre's. And they gave him imperishable glory.

HOPEFUL SIGNS

There are upon the horizon indications of a better trend in the matter of the business outlook of the country.

First, the rush of funds voted by congress has broken down the dam of restraint, and soon the money will be sluicing out into the many arteries of trade. Inclusive of the $160,000,000 appropriated in aid of agriculture the government relief funds now total $884,058,000 for the coming calendar year. These funds for the most part will go into basic construction industries which in turn will have a stimulating effect on all affiliated fields of activity. Also, for the most part, these funds will be expended along carefully planned lines and from which the government obtains sound investment value.

Second, inventories of the big industries are running low. The Department of Commerce keeps tab on these inventories, and reports that purchasing orders have been held up as the prices of raw materials continue their downward course with the result that buying must start soon to replenish depleted stocks. Prices for raw materials are now considered as "scraping bottom." Indeed, when so many articles of commerce may now be openly purchased for less than the cost of their production, potential buyers are not using good judgment in longer staying out of the market.

While there is still a surplus of wheat, cotton, sugar, rubber and copper, there is no longer an oversupply of manufactured cotton goods or rubber tires. Excessive stocks of automobiles in dealers' hands have been cut down by decreased production, and in owners' hands by deferred replacements. The power to consume is here and is never reduced in the same proportion as the fall in industrial production in time of depression. It is expected that there will soon be an enlarged production of tires, cotton goods and automobiles, and that activity in these three major industries will cause a far-reaching stimulation all along the line.

A third factor is the action of the New York Federal Reserve Bank in cutting its rediscount rate to two per cent, setting an all-time low and establishing the cheapest money rate of any central bank in the world. This means plenty of credit. It shows too that with opportunity on every hand the public has been acting the part of a drowsy person more interested in sleep than in attempting anything requiring energy. In reference to the low interest rate Barron says: "It definitely heralds, in due course, unexampled ease for the American money market. While there is no basis for experience upon which to theorize, it would seem that a two per cent rediscount rate should be a potent influence in arresting the destructive processes of deflation. It establishes a new yardstick for measuring yields of every form of investment and must hasten the employment of capital, which liquidation and fear have driven into cover."

However business recovery involves a great many different factors just as business depression is caused or effected by a great many different factors. Judging by the past the improvement will be slow but consistent. It is better so. Wild and hectic fluctuations in business are just as harmful as immoderate living upon one's health. When we get things in business back to normal the purpose should be to help maintain them in "the calm and even tenor of their way."

ENFORCING THE LAW

The decision of the court of criminal appeals in Texas affirming a death sentence meted out to Dave Goodwin will serve to show the great injustice sometimes done by the people to the courts in blaming them for decisions when they have only obeyed the laws enacted by the people through their legislature.

In Texas it seems that a defendant who opposes certain conduct at a trial must not only object and secure a ruling from the trial court, but after that ruling is made must state, "I except." The legislature has so enacted the law that if he fails to say, "I except," the court of appeals is without the right to inquire into the justice of the trial. In enacting this law the Texas legislature reached back to a practice obtaining long before anyone thought of writing the Declaration of Independence, a practice that is without merit and without virtue, technical in the extreme and useless.

In considering the Goodwin case the Texas court says: "It may appear harsh and unjust for a man's life to be taken when the record shows he has not been tried according to law but such appears to be the demand of the legislature and to it we must submit. The rule which under these circumstances refuses the right to reverse for such an error is inexcusable and an apt illustration of the fact that convictions as well as acquittals may result from technicalities."

No doubt in such a situation the pardon power of the governor may be used to good purpose but the example should not be permitted to pass without serving the further purpose of indicating clearly to the people that courts do not make the law but are under the solemn obligation to enforce the laws that the legislature enacts, and so long as the legislature acts within its rights under the constitution the courts are powerless to question either its motives or the justice of its actions.

Just Folks

By Edgar A. Guest

THE YOUNG MOTHER
She seemed so frivolous and gay,
So fond of pleasures, old folks said,
Who watched her dancing down the way
"There's nothing in her pretty head."

They heard her laughter everywhere;
They heard her lightly talk of dress,
And murmured, sadly watching her,
"No serious thought can she possess."

Well, she has ceased afar to roam,
And done with sprightly speech and glib,
For in a small apartment home
She bends above a little crib.

That pretty head is now concerned
With proper food for babes small;
From selfish pleasure she has turned
To tend a tiny infant's call.

Now up and down the street she walks,
Wheeling her baby in the sun,
And this is all she thinks and talks:
How best to raise a little one.

And this is all the old folks say:
"She seemed so frivolous a miss,
So very light of heart and gay,
We never dreamed she'd change like this!"

It Takes Will Power to Dominate Canaries

A lad in Milwaukee whose New Year's celebration ran into the dawning hours of Thursday morning, finally wandered home to bed. Something went amiss and neighbors summoned the police when they heard revolver shots. Came the squad. They found the lad asleep, a gun beside his bed and a recently expelled canary in a cage nearby. They woke the sleeper. He told them all about it.

"I told that canary two or three times I was boss here and I wanted the singing stopped but he kept on so I shot him."

HOW TO FEED YOUNG AMERICA

EFFECTIVELY

By Uncle Art

Part II

First go to the refrigerator and take out bottle which has been prepared during the daytime. It is always better to prepare the liquid and fill the bottle ahead of time—you only lose two hours of sleep at night instead of four. Heat the pan of water. Remove cap and TRY to put on the nipple. Bottle will probably skid out from under the nipple during this procedure and spill all the milk. Try to keep quiet—remember, impressions are formed by children early in life. When you have succeeded in your initial operation, place bottle in hot water. Try to stay awake. Young America will be of great assistance at this point.

After bottle is ready, pick baby up from bed

This is something like that Peanut Vendor song—it may go on for weeks and weeks.

Major Hoople is probably right—if you do the rest of the year what you do on New Year's day, then you'll get a lot of sleep during 1931.

BATTLE OF PRINCETON

On Jan. 3, 1777, Washington, fresh from his victory at Trenton, soundly defeated the British at Princeton, in one of the most decisive battles of the Revolutionary War.

Cornwallis, British commander, had left part of his force at Princeton, N. J., in order to hurry south to catch Washington. He found him between Trenton and a bend in the Delaware. Thinking that Washington could not hope to escape, with the British army in front of him and the ice-choked river behind, Cornwallis expected to "bag the old fox" in the morning. At night, however, Washington crept stealthily around the British and reached Princeton just at a time when the American force was being driven back. Then Washington, riding at the head of his troops, advanced to within 30 yards of the enemy and directed the battle. When the smoke of battle had cleared the British were found to have lost heavily.

Soon after, Washington led his army to the hills of Morristown, in northern New Jersey, where they spent the rest of the winter.

Personal Health Talks

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

Noted Physician and Author

ALL THAT SNIFFLES IS NOT CRI

I sincerely believe that in at least half of all the best circumstantial evidence of "taking cold" from exposure to draft, wet feet, change of weather or any such everyday environmental incident, the victim of the alleged "cold" is really subject to hyperesthetic rhinitis or to atopy. Neither term will mean anything to the casual reader, but give me time and I'll get you thinking.

Hyperesthetic is a funny medical term, I suppose. It means oversensitive. I am a little afraid we don't know yet just why certain individuals are oversensitive to conditions which tend to set the nose running and bring on sneezing and snorting up of the nasal passages; for one thing there seems to be some inherent fault in the calcium metabolism of such individuals—but there again I perpetrate a meaningless medical term. Well, let's say they just can't utilize the calcium or lime in their food as well as they should. It is astonishing how many individuals in the community are subject to this peculiar hyperesthetic rhinitis.

Atopy is the next thing to explain. First, perhaps, we had better explain coriza. Old Dr. Weber's definition of coriza will do for the moment—acute inflammation of the mucous membrane of the nasal cavity; nasal catarrh; cold in the head. Of course the old Doc composed that one long before we invented cri. Atopy, according to the same authority, means out of place, but that isn't quite enough for our purpose; doctors never call a floating kidney or a sagging stomach or a tipped—anything like that "atopic." In modern medical parlance atopy means hay fever that isn't—a condition with the characteristic symptoms of hay fever but certainly not hay fever because it occurs out of season or perhaps the year around. When a patient drops in and casually drops around and tells the doctor he has hay fever, in the middle of winter, there is something out of place about it and if the doctor is at all up to date he will endeavor to diagnose what really ails the misguided one.

Among the real causes of atopy coriza are hypersensitivity to, face powder, insect powder or perhaps a special dust to which the victim is exposed seasonally or only when in a certain place, where the dust is encountered. Sad indeed was the case of the young benedict who acquired a perennial hay fever along with a wife; but he didn't divorce her; the doctor discovered the young man was hypersensitive to the orange root in the toilet powder used by the young lady; she changed her brand and the young man quit sniffing.

When your alleged "cold" comes on rather suddenly, and clears up suddenly when it goes—whether in hours or days—I beg you to withhold your testimony about the harm done by drafts, change of weather and the like, at least until you've been tested for allergic sensitivity. (Never mind the word allergic now; it means something like atopy.) Until recently only a few physicians were equipped to diagnose perennial hay fever or atopy coriza. Today any good up-to-date doctor can apply the skin tests and determine your pet poison. When you know precisely what it is that causes your trouble, it is usually feasible to procure relief.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Keep Your Feet Dry

Kindly reprint your formula for perspiring feet. (E. W.)
Answer.—For ordinary cases I think the most satisfactory control is a periodic (say monthly) treatment of all the shoes with formaldehyde. Pour into each shoe an ounce or two of the solution given below, swing it around to wet the entire insole and a bit of the lining, then drain it out into the next shoe, and set the shoe thus treated to dry for at least 24 hours, preferably in the sun, before you wear it again. The strength of the solution for the purpose is as follows:
Standard formaldehyde solution 2 ounces.
Water . . . . . One-half pint.
This same solution may be used in more troublesome cases to soak the feet of all stockings, letting them dry out for a day before you wear them.

In still more troublesome cases, especially where there is marked odor, the same strength of solution may be used as an application to the skin of the soles and between the toes once a week only and always let it dry well in the air before putting on shoes or stockings. Keep the solution off your fingers—use a brush or swab or sponge on a stick to paint it on the soles.

Rubber Garments and the Eyes
One frequently hears reference made to the injurious effect upon the eyes occasioned by the wearing of rubbers indoors or otherwise when unnecessary. (I, E. W.)

Answer.—That superstition belongs with the one about "taking cold" from inclement weather. Some of our self termed "scientific" doctors still cherish these superstitions, so we need not be astonished if untutored laymen do.

Slim Jim and Skinny Winnie
Is a fallen stomach more prevalent in slim persons than in others? Is it serious and what is the remedy? (K. S. A.)

Answer.—Probably underweight persons suffer more from the fallen stomach obsession than we fat folks do. The best preventive and cure for falling of the stomach or any other appearance is, keep sleek and fat. One of the train of troubles coming to the girl or woman who reduces unwisely is sagging of one or another internal organ. Moral: Cut out the food dieting before you lose your health.

The Tinymites

By Hal Cochran

EACH Tiny took his riding turn. Said Scouty, "There is much to learn about everything, it seems to me. We think we know a lot and then each day we learn some more. That's what experience is for. When we are older we will be real smart, as like as not."

"You're right," replied the Travel Man. "When young, learn everything you can and then make sure you don't forget the knowledge you have stored. Remember all you hear and see. That's good advice, it seems to me." And then, "Come on you Tinymites," the friendly hunter roared. "I'm going to show you something new and I feel sure you'll like it too. We'll have to hike a little ways. It won't be hard, you'll find." And so the Tinymites, hand in hand, trailed right along upon the sand. It wasn't very long until they reached the hunter's blind.

"Now this," said he, "is where I hide until a monstrous hen's spied. The hen, of course, can't see me and it doesn't know I'm here. Then it will walk around, or run and then I shoot my trusty gun. I always try to shoot before it comes up very near."

"What if you miss?" one Tiny said. "Gee, that's something that I would dread. The hen might get very mad and start to run your way." The hunter snarled, "I shoot again! The hen will get real frightened then. Of course all hunters are dangerous and very far from playful." He then explained the blind was made of long thatched grass. "Don't be afraid to crawl inside." He told the bunch. "Let's all hide out of sight. I have my spear and gun right to war! Maybe I can show you how to shoot or spear a hen." Then the bunch crawled in all right.

(The Tinymites see a real hen in the next story.)

"The past," says C. S. Sundberg, the poet, "is a barbet of aspen." Yes, the scene has shifted.

A Bystander In Washington

BY HERBERT PLUMMER

Washington — "It matters not wot'er 'e was before,

"Or wot 'is parents fancied for 'is nyme;

"When 'e's pocketed 'is shilling and 'is uniform 'e's filling,

" 'Is nyme is Tommy Atkins just the syme."

Thus did Kipling make immortal the lot of the British soldier. And similarly is the lot of the American soldier described in the words of the famous old bugle call:

"You're in the army now;

"You're not behind the plow."

There are doubtless two or three of these new United States senators who can appreciate the status of Tommy Atkins and the American soldier.

For they are learning and learning fast that "You're in the senate now" has a real meaning—that it is just as significant to them as Kipling's words are to Tommy Atkins or the bugle call to the American soldier.

Look At Morrow

There's Dwight Morrow for example. He has attained marked success in three distinct fields—banking, diplomacy and naval affairs. As a former member of the house of Morgan it would appear he could render important service as a member of the senate banking and currency committee.

Since he also was successful as an ambassador and as a delegate to the London naval conference, there is no reason why as a member of the foreign relations committee or the committee on naval affairs he could not have been just as valuable.

True, he preferred not being placed on the banking committee. But he didn't object to the other two.

And what did he get—this banker, this diplomat, this expert on naval affairs?

Education and labor, military affairs, post office and post roads, printing and public buildings and grounds.

Davis Is Another

Also, look at James J. Davis—President Hoover's secretary of labor.

Was he assigned to committees where he could best utilize the special knowledge he has? Well, he was given berths on the committees of banking and currency, civil service, interoceanic canals, manufactures and naval affairs.

Then, too, it will be remembered that a man by the name of Buckley from Ohio came to the senate outspoken for repeal of the 18th amendment. What chance will he have for this cause on the committees to which he has been assigned—banking and currency, manufactures and privileges and elections?

"You're in the senate now!"

Which merely means what it says:

A newcomer must go through the mill—take what's given him.

Seen And Heard In New York

BY RICHARD MASSOCK

New York—Channing Pollock, the playwright, once a dramatic critic himself, now is one of their severest critics.

Introduced to Pollock at a recent banquet, Sir Guy Standing, English actor, said: "You're the first dramatic critic I ever met."

Well, then, Sir Guy, here are a few notes about some of the town's first-string play reviewers, including four of the 14, for one thing, write their commentaries in their newspaper offices. They are J. Brooks Atkinson, Burns Mantle, Percy Hammond and Whitney Bolton.

The rest write their reviews either in offices near Broadway, in hotels, or in the quietude of their homes. Messengers take their copy to the printers.

Few From New York

Only three are native New Yorkers and two, Gilbert Gabriel and Kelcey Allen, were Brooklyn-born. Walter Winchell is the only true Manhattanite.

Atkinson is a Melrose, Mass., boy; Hammond hails back to Cadiz, O.; John Mason Brown comes from Louisville; Mantle was born out Denver-way; Bolton in Washington; D. C.; John Anderson in Pensacola, Fla.; Gilbert Seldes in Alliance, N. J.; Richard Lockridge in St. Joseph, Mo.; Charles Darn-ton in Adrian, Mich.; Robert Garland in Baltimore and Robert Littell in Milwaukee.

Littell is the only dramatic critic in the Social Register. His wife is Anita Blaine Damosch, daughter of America's illustrious orchestra conductor, Walter Damosch.

Most of the critics have been star reporters in the past.

Burns Mantle, on the other hand, was a printer in Denver, the only one who could decipher the long-hand reviews of an old-time critic there. One night the critic was unable to attend a play opening. Mantle, who had seen the play before he came to work that night, sat down at his linotype machine and wrote a review of it in type. As a result, he was made assistant dramatic critic.

Critical Bits

Mantle, off of the older critics, lives on Long Island, and always completes his writing in time to stop at a candy counter to buy a fig bar before he catches a late train home.

Hammond also lives out on Long Island, but he keeps a hotel room in town for the night he has to attend the theater.

Atkinson writes his reviews in longhand. His hobby is rambling about town.

One of those who write in a Broadway office is Gabriel, who has to leave at the end of the second act to make an early edition. His wife stays on and calls for him afterward on the way back to their Fifth avenue penthouse.

Brown, Anderson, Lockridge, Darn-ton and Seldes write their criticisms at home. Messengers from their respective offices call for the copy. Anderson has his ready at 1 a. m. Lockridge's faithful boy is a 50-year-old wounded war veteran.

Kelcey Allen rose from the ranks of the messenger boys. He used to carry copy for a critic himself. He lives in one hotel and has his mail address at another, where he does his writing.

Four are Harvard men—Atkinson, Littell, Brown and Seldes. Gabriel went to Williams, Anderson and Bolton to the University of Virginia, Lockridge to Missouri, and Hammond to Franklin college. Nine are in their thirties in age.

Barbs

A traveler just back from Greenland says there is no unemployment problem among the Eskimos. It seems they are doing a whale of a business.

One fellow who can say business is on the rocks and smile is the diamond salesman.

Employers who cut wages don't realize apparently that all work and no pay make Jack exceeding scarce.

The angler thinks he's the most patient of all sportsmen because he's got to bait and see.

ST. MARY QUINT BEATS ALUMNI BY 14 TO 7 COUNT

Victors Assume Early Lead and Are Never Threatened

Menasha — Outclassed in every phase of the game, the St. Mary high school alumni cagers were defeated by the undergraduate quintet, 14 to 7, at St. Mary's gymnasium Friday evening. The high school five held the advantage in all but the final quarter.

Green, Coopman and Resch starred for the high school team, playing a heady floor game and scoring on a number of fast plays under the basket. Prunuske and Mayer, both playing at guard, scored the only field goals for the alumni.

In the first period the high school squad swung into a 4 to 1 lead and increased the advantage to 8 to 1 before the close of the half. Using a fast passing attack, Green and Coopman were constant threats throughout both periods.

An additional 6 points were added to the undergraduate total in the third quarter while the alumni failed to count on more than a pair of free throws. An alumni rally in the final period failed to add more than 10 points to the total score.

The lineup:

Green R. F. Thelen
Coopman L. F. Holzkecht
Resch C. E. Kricher
Mayer G. Mayer
Mackin L. G. Prunuske

told the cabinet that Madame Joffre was as anxious as her husband had been that the funeral be held without fatiguing either the army or the people of Paris. The members of the government deferred to this request in some respects, but decided that the body will pass under the arch of the triumph on the way to Notre Dame cathedral and will rest for a moment before the tomb of the unknown soldier.

Throughout Paris and all of France today the flags over public buildings fluttered at half staff. The body will lie in state in the chapel of the military school near the Eiffel tower on Monday and Tuesday from 9 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock in the evening. The funeral service will begin on Wednesday at 9 o'clock.

The soldiers who fought under Marshal Joffre at the Marne will march past the body at the Invalides.

Louis Barthou will be the only funeral orator. He will speak in the name of the government and of the French academy.

M. Barthou today issued to the French army this message, recalling that other memorable order the marshal issued just before the beginning of the battle of the Marne: "The minister of war wishes to notify the army of France that it has suffered a great loss. Marshal Joffre is dead. He saved France on the Marne. He broke the power of the enemy. The force of his soul, his indomitable energy and his never-ending services made that final victory possible."

STOPPED GERMAN ADVANCE

Creday, the English historian, years ago wrote his "Fifteen Decisive Battles of the World." The sixteenth—the first battle of the Marne—was won by General Joseph Jacques Desaix Joffre, commander of the French armies in the west during the great war. Ending a series of disheartening retreats, after four days and nights of incessant fighting, he stopped 2,500,000 Germans and drove them back when they were within 30 miles of Paris.

"I mean to deliver the big battle under the most favorable conditions, at my own time and on the ground I have chosen," declared Joffre to his generals. "If necessary I shall continue to retreat. I shall retreat until I am in a position whatever will make me alter my plans."

Child That Is Naughty Needs Aid

BY ANGELO PATRI

When a child is bad tempered, unreasonable, naughty, his need is for relief, not punishment. There is a reason for his demonstrations and the sane thing to do is find the reason and remove the irritating cause.

First look to his diet and elimination. If his diet is wrong, too much of sugar, or too little, too much of anything, too little of essential food values of any kind, the digestion and nutrition processes are set out of order and the situation is reflected in his conduct.

Then think about his sleep. Does he sleep long hours, and soundly. He should. Do you regulate the household so that the quiet so necessary for sleep is offered him. Or is there a succession of parties, a nightly session with the loud speaker turned on to capacity, excitement and noise and late hours. Nothing will set a child wrong sooner.

What about the atmosphere of the home? Is there someone who dominates the family from daylight to dark? Someone who nags, or teases or frightens the child? Or someone who gives him everything he thinks he would like? If the people who make up the child's immediate world are not steady, calm, happy, in their attitudes toward the child he will be jumpy, irregular in his responses to all demands, and very troublesome. People stimulate children for good or ill. They can not be negative. They count one way or the other. Consider this when you feel you can't stand this child another day. It may be that he has been feeling that way about a lot of things only he doesn't know how to tell it.

What happens to him in school? Is he in a crowded class where he is hurried from subject to subject without a let-up, without a pause for rest and reflection? How about the teacher? Does she shout all day long? And is the child in fear of her or anyone else about the place? I have known the janitor to strike fear into the soul of a child just by slapping his fist and making a face at him. One child was so worried by an old person who sat with a huge basket of nick-knacks close to the school gate that she could not concentrate upon work or play and had temper tantrums daily. When the old person and her basket were explained things settled down very comfortably.

Now and then a dose of physic is called for. There are children who become very naughty and ill tempered if they are constipated. Watch out for that. Poor eyesight makes children do weird things. Relieve the situation first. Punishment is a last resort and none too efficacious.

I know that a child is bound to misbehave, badly now and then. That is not taking the matter with him. Indeed he is perfectly well. His play spirit gets the better of him because he has so much energy that no game, no activity fully uses it. He overflows into mischief. That is a very different thing. Give him something to do that will use up energy and never mind about the punishment. If the worst comes to the worst and all you can do is to make him sit on a chair and keep still for a time, do it. That won't hurt him occasionally. But remember that relief, not punishment is what he usually needs. Girls as well as boys, always.

New Year's Baby Hair To Diversified Downy

Your Birthday

WHAT TOMORROW MEANS TO YOU

"CAPRICORN" If January 4th is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 8 a. m., to 9:30 a. m., from 1 p. m. to 2 p. m., and from 6:30 p. m. to 9 p. m. The only danger period is from 4 p. m. to 5:30 p. m.

Some favorable news may safely be expected on January 4th, either strengthening material affairs or friendly ties. It is an excellent opportunity for travel, or for change of environment. The signs augur, however, that, though industry will be rewarded, speculation must be avoided.

Children born on this January 4th will be blessed with many gifts. They will have bright dispositions, strong characters, patient natures, and persevering tendencies. Success is assured them, if they can control their emotions, which are liable, at times, to dominate their judgment.

Yours is a brilliant mind. Your conceptions are good and your imagination never submerges you in a sea of improbabilities. You always are equipped with a life saver in the form of practicability. The one trouble with you is that you too readily jump from one task to another. Concentration is conspicuous by its absence. Restlessness characterizes your actions, and you cannot sit down quietly and meditate. You rush at things too feverishly, and want to do too much at once. The enthusiasm which inspired you to start does not remain with you to the end. Your disposition is a variable one. You are not free from a strain of morbidity, although you successfully hide this from your associates. On the whole, however, you are a fairly cheerful companion, although at times, in the midst of social gossip, you are quite often unmindful of what is going on, or being said, and your mentality is working out some new idea. Your brain is a trifle too active, and outbursts endeavor.

Your horoscope indicates that you will experience many ups and downs, and only in later years, will you learn to appreciate mind control, and you will then achieve that success, which a halitoscopic mentality will have denied you in your youth. In your home life, especially if a woman, you will cause many difficulties, as you will always be wanting to make changes when none are necessary, and it will be very difficult for you, or anyone around you, to "stay put."

SUCCESSFUL PEOPLE BORN January 4th:

- 1—Washington C. DePauw—philanthropist.
- 2—Blanche Walsh—actress.
- 3—John Churchill Ainsworth—Portland Oregon financier.
- 4—Carier Glass—U. S. Senator.
- 5—Jacob Grimm—fairly late author.
- 6—Sir Isaac Pitman—originator of shorthand.

Society And Outsiders At Hoovers' Reception

Washington —(P)—Official Washington was on the wing this week, especially on New Year's day when the White House and cabinet homes were the mecca for many thousands of residents both official and unofficial.

Hungry diplomats who had risen early—far earlier than is the custom for most diplomats—were in their automobiles from the White House where at the president's annual reception there is no food, to the Pan-American building where Secretary of State and Mrs. Stimson held their New Year's day breakfast to the diplomatic corps and where there was food in plenty.

Fashions for women were set for the rest of the season at the White House and at the breakfast. Mrs. Hoover came down the state stairway with the president and it was observed that the custom of wearing a hat at the morning receptions and mid-day events was taboo. The glossy white hair of the first lady was slightly waved and done in simple fashion. Nor did she wear gloves. Her gown was of rich purple crepe, the skirt long and full, flowing at the foot to the floor, the bodice a vest of cloth of silver, the long sleeves had puffs of silver at the hands. Instead of the bouquet of flowers usually carried on such an occasion, she swung from a slender chain, a purse that matched her gown.

Mrs. Gann, tall and stately, was handsome in a gown of black and gold brocade and black crepe. Her hat of black velvet was small and becoming with a plume curled gracefully about the right ear. One always looks for Mrs. Longworth, wife of the speaker, on these occasions and her New Year's day costume was of silver and rose metal cloth, with a hat entirely of blue. Mrs. Stimson, whose gown was naturally compared to those of the women of the diplomatic corps, some of whom were richly clad and others in simple style, was of heavy silk crepe in elephant brown—almost a taupe.

One of the handsomest gowns at the diplomatic breakfast was that of Mrs. Leander Loos of Kansas City, fashioned of rich pearly purple velvet with rare lace on the bodice. Aucht her shoulders was a large Russian sable piece.

Vice President Curtis' daughter, Mrs. George, wore a modish and becoming costume of rich red velvet with a hat of the same material and color. It was these handsome gowns as well as the uniforms and decorations of the diplomats and officers which gave the glow of color to the New Year's day entertainments.

HOME-MADE FACIAL MASKS ARE EFFECTIVE

BY ALICIA HART
In olden times, the royal ladies had their minions lay strips of raw meat over their features. These were effective, if not particularly pleasant face masks.

Today you yourself can make a home-made mask that is infinitely more fun to use. These are meal masks, used with different ingredients.

The first and very efficacious home-made facial mask that I recommend is buttermilk and cornmeal. Buttermilk is a good bleacher. Any milk is an astringent. These are two of the first requisites of masks.

Mix fresh buttermilk with a quarter cup of fine white corn-meal until the cornmeal is saturated but not so wet that it won't stick. This is not so pleasant a mask to use as some that adhere to the skin without using a cloth to cover them. But if you lie down and spread the mixture over your face and neck and then place over it a linen cloth wrung out of buttermilk, it will be tremendously soothing and refreshing.

Tie up the chin, when masking it. Rest at least a half hour with this mask on, lying prone, without a pillow. In most of these masks, it is a good idea to do without a pillow when wearing them. Lifting the head from the bed disarranges the mask.

A second effective home-made mask is almond meal, an egg and some lemon juice. Egg is as much an astringent as milk and any mask with it in it is apt to be effective. Egg smooths the face, leaves the skin taut and erases those faint but tell-tale lines of weariness that you brought home from the office with you.

Break the egg into a cup, stir it to break the yolk but do not beat. Add almond meal enough to make a paste and then add a tablespoon of lemon juice. Mix the whole thoroughly and apply to the face as you have applied the others. It must be moist, enough to spread on evenly. Leave on for 20 minutes to a half hour.

When removing any of these masks, use a soft washing or cotton dipped in lukewarm water. The minute they are off, splash on your favorite astringent and you are ready for your powder base and make-up.

MY NEIGHBOR SAYS—

Instead of squeezing lemons when ever a drink of lemonade is wanted, squeeze several lemons at a time, strain the juice and keep it in a bottle for future use.

To remove stains left by milk, meat juice, blood or olive oil, soak the material in cold water for a few minutes, then rub on soap and wash well in cold water.

When you make chicken soup try adding a grating of nutmeg just before serving.

To tell when a cake is done; It shrinks from the pan, it springs back when pressed lightly with the finger, it leaves a clean, non-sticky tester of straw.

The Story of Sue

by MARGERY HALE
© 1929 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

CORINNE had grown tired of waiting for developments. Drifting from room to room of her house that morning, in a pair of golden lounging pajamas set off with splashes of black fur, she had finally tossed herself down on a great couch in front of the fireplace, and curled up on a dozen pillows, looking more like a sprawled-out doll than a girl.

When the door-bell rang she did not even hear it. Not until a voice spoke by her elbow. Then she scrambled up.

"Oh, hello, where did you come from?"

It was Harry's cousin, Clifford Becker, who had come in.

"Been kicked out of school again?"

"How did you guess? What made you think that I'm the kind of a man who doesn't stay?"

"I've seen you do the wandering stunt too many times. Lost a lot of poker?" She sat back down on the couch.

"Do I look like a man who ever lost at anything but . . . love?"

"You look broken, Will, what do you want? I've got real worries. My father's been arrested."

"I know." There was instant police sympathy in the manner of the man. "I can understand . . ."

"Stop it!" Corinne struck the floor with one high-heeled golden mule. "You've pulled some crooked deals, but we don't do that in our family; I'm surprised you could come here after all you've done."

She remembered the emerald that he had tried to steal through the assistance of Jean Brady. "Why did you come?"

He lighted a cigaret and threw the match in the flames before he answered. "I wanted to see you."

"You wanted me to use my wiles . . . if any . . . to get you some money from the family coffers, didn't you? Well, I'm not cooperating. You can go straight to Harry's father, if you need any. And he won't help you this time."

"You played sort of beggar maiden yourself." Now his words were sharp and cold. "I suppose you think you're the biggest bargain the family ever had. But I didn't come here to quarrel. Besides, I have a luncheon date. I'm here for a little while and I'm staying with Harry's father and Nancy."

"Oh! Well, go keep your date. I'm going to town myself. And as for those words you said . . ." Corinne's dark head came up proudly. "Just remember this, Clifford Becker. Maybe we haven't much money in our family but we have plenty of honor, though some people are trying to get it spotted now. But we haven't done anything to be ashamed of."

PORTRAITS: THE OBSTINATE GIVER

Are you an obstinate giver? An obstinate giver is one who makes up his or her mind that he or she intends to give a certain person a certain gift.

Having so determined, nothing except an act of God can prevent that gift from being made!

I know a young woman who lives in a small apartment. A man friend of hers decided to give her a police dog for a Christmas present. Full of pleasure with his idea, he asked her if she would like a puppy for a pet.

Although she is very fond of dogs she knew she could not care for a dog easily in her small quarters. She told him so frankly.

But the man was not at all dismayed.

"Wait," he said cheerfully. "You haven't seen the kind of puppy I mean! It's a pedigree dog."

On Christmas the man gave her the puppy despite what she had said.

Another man I know, who is very devoted to golf, wished to interest a girl friend of his in the game. The girl hated golf and did not have enough time to join a club. Neither did she have much leisure, as she works every day, including Saturday. Nevertheless, on Christmas, a set of golf clubs arrived and she had to pretend to be pleased and grateful.

There are not many obstinate givers in the world.

Most of us give what we like—and trust that our friends will like it also. If we are lucky enough to know exactly what our friends want we give it to them.

But the obstinate giver is a type—a type that needs plain speaking. She or he gives gifts as a sort of corrective measure. Their gifts ed of. And you are low, and lazy, and I . . . hate . . . you."

The man's eyes smoldered and his face burned a dull red under his skin. "You little vixen, if I had time I'd fix you . . . I'd . . . teach you what it is to be a thief's daughter to talk to a Becker."

"A whole lot of honor you're bringing to the name, running around getting expelled," Corinne shot back. "And I'm not a thief's daughter. You'll eat those words and choke on them, too. Just wait! You're a low-down, lying ingrate! And I hate you! Get out of here, and if you ever come back I'll have you put out. Now go!"

Corinne stood very straight, eyes flashing with red-brown fire, chin up, until he had gone. Then she sat down on the shining cushions and sobbed until she heard the silver tinkling of the telephone.

and daily educational. They are desirous to supply you with what they think you should like—whether you happen to like it or not.

If you know a woman who is an obstinate giver there is only one way to cope with her. Give her, whether she wants it or not, something you think she should have.

If you don't cure her propensity—at least you are even!

If you sow, and the obstinate giver does not, give her a work-basket. If you cook and the obstinate giver does not, give her some sauce pans. This is the true spirit of the obstinate giver.

If you wish help with your problems write to the author.

ALUMNICAGERS DEFEAT SCHOOL QUINTET, 23-19

Game Is Close and Gives
Red and White Five
Real Workout

New London—The Alumni squad, led by Dick Johnson, gave the high school basketball team Friday evening a trimming in a close game, 23 to 19. Johnson alone beat the high school in the first half when he made nine points to the high school's four. The old timers and half held their opponents to one basket and two free throws. In the second half, the game speeded up considerably with Pfeiffer making the first basket. After Charlesworth added a point on a free throw, Merle Seims on a fast out of bound play brought the score up to 12 to 6. The Red and Whites were still aided by the older boys and hurried their shots. Charlesworth started at one end of the floor and dribbled through the whole opposition to make an easy basket. The Red and Whites then came to momentarily when Westphal broke through for a pretty basket and followed it with free throws.

Dernbach went out on fouls in this period with Floyd Raby and Watson Reuter coming through the game. The newcomers were greeted with a pretty basket from Johnson, who tossed the ball in, bringing the score 17 to 11. The last quarter's play was fast with Pfeiffer and Westphal splitting two points between them when each man baited a rebound through the hoop. Chuck came through again a second time when he again baited one through in the mixup under long shots with Johnson passing from beyond the center. Chuck heaved in a long shot from the side, bringing the score 21 to 17, and Dernbach retaliated by bringing in a sleeper for his side and the score was 23 to 17. With only a moment or two to go, Pfeiffer stole the ball and the game ended 23 to 19. A dance followed the game.

IMPROVEMENT SEEN IN CORN RAISING IN THIS SECTION

Farmers Finally Show Interest in Raising Ripe Crop

BY W. F. WINSEY

Years ago or after the introduction of the silo on the farms, farmers changed from the growing of corn loaded with ripe ears to the growing of fodder corn. Before they made the change they became convinced that the silo was capable of turning out better feed than was put into it and, therefore, ripe ears on silage corn was so much waste feed. All that they wanted was cornstalks and to get the greatest possible amount, they discarded the home-grown seed and obtained seed from the southern states. From the latter seed they raised stalks ten feet tall. After the southern seed became unpopular, the farmers turned back to home-grown seed which they drilled at the rate of 20 to 30 pounds to the acre, two or three times the quantity they should plant to get good crops of corn. As some farmers still believe in the theory that a silo will turn out better feed than the field, it is put into it they snap the ears, before putting the stalks into the silo, and are not sufficiently careful about the condition of the bare stalks. Last fall for instance hundreds and hundreds of tons of cornstalks went into silos after being weathered on the ground in bundles and destroyed as far as feeding value is concerned.

The past few years, however, has marked a great improvement in corn growing in this section of the state. Farmers are becoming as much interested in raising ripe corn for silage and for their cows as they are in raising ripe corn for hogs and chickens. To get ripe corn they select a field and most strain, check the seed instead of drilling it, fertilize the field, and plant from the tenth to the middle of May. They check the seed in order to completely control weeds with horse power, fertilize the field to hasten growth and plant early to escape fall frosts.

A large percentage of farmers who fields were low or comparatively low raised quantities of ripe corn last summer but failed often in past years either on account of slow growing seed, late planting, drilling the corn too thickly, letting weeds rob the corn of feed, or using no commercial fertilizer. Jacobson Brothers, Green Bay, have not failed, however, in the past twenty years to get good yields of ripe corn, and there is no sense in any farmer failing in this corn section of the state.

As long as Jacobson Brothers have been raising corn, they have been raising alfalfa also late in the fall after top dressing an alfalfa field with manure, they plow under the third crop of alfalfa for the season. They plow late so that the alfalfa roots have no chance to decay and part with the nitrogen contained. They broadcast phosphate on the field at the rate of 250 pounds per acre and mix it with the soil. After making a fine seed bed in the spring they check the corn about the tenth of May, applying commercial fertilizer to the hills at the rate of 150 pounds per acre. The fertilizer near the hills gives the seed a quick, vigorous start. They work the field lengthwise and crosswise to kill weeds. In this way the brothers raise not only big crops of ripe corn but also of silage corn.

The year following a corn crop, the field is plowed and grain which is used as a nurse crop for alfalfa. The fertilizer used on the cornfield slops up in big crops of grain and excellent stands of alfalfa.

The Jacobson Brothers' crop rotation is practical and is adapted to each farm on which the owner has trouble in raising alfalfa and ripe corn in large quantities for his animals and silo.

BEACH STORY NOW OFFERED ON SCREEN

"Silver Horde" to Be Shown Sunday at Fox Theatre

Carl Dane and George Arthur, the two great comedians will be seen in person on the stage Sunday. You'll laugh as you've never laughed before. We've seen them on the screen in "The Big Parade." But wait until you see them in person. You will laugh all the while you're here and after you go home. We've always wanted to see them in person now here is your chance and don't fail to be here.

Packed with all the steel-fisted action of the original story, "The Silver Horde," Radio Pictures' adaptation of the famous Rex Beach novel, comes to the screen of the Fox theatre Sunday and at the Mid-night show Saturday as one of the year's outstanding outdoor dramas.

There is a remarkable cast with Evelyn Brent, one of the foremost dramatic actresses and creator of a score of powerful roles, is seen as Cherry Malotte, Louis Wolheim, Joel McCrea, Raymond Hatton, Jean Arthur, Blanche Sweet, Gavin Gordon, Funnell Pratt and Ivan Linow round out the notable cast.

"The Silver Horde" is perhaps the most powerful of all Rex Beaches stories. Three terrific fights are staged with telling effect. One of them involves many boats and a score of men. Another, between Joel McCrea and Ivan Linow, is one of the most spectacular extended man-to-man encounters ever staged for a motion picture.

The production was directed by George Archambaud and from this production we expect to attract large crowds to the Fox theatre.

BRILLIANT CAST SUPPORTS BENNETT

"Sin Takes a Holiday" to Be Shown Next at Appleton Theatre

Carrying out its policy of backing up its stars and feature productions with artists whose names, talents and popularity will enhance the entertainment values of its twenty special dialog pictures to be produced during the current screen season, Famous has assembled one of the most brilliant casts ever assembled in any picture, to support Constance Bennett in her new stellar vehicle, "Sin Takes a Holiday," which opens at Warner's Appleton Theatre Sunday.

Kenneth MacKenna, who has the male lead, was Mary Pickford's leading man in "Forever Yours," and he scored a sensational hit in "Men Without Women." He played leads in several Theatre Guild productions. His screen debut was made in a Bebe Daniels vehicle.

Basil Rathbone, who is featured, won wide recognition in pictures by his able portrayals in support of Ruth Chatterton, Norma Shearer and others. His screen debut opposite Mae Murray in the "Masked Bride" followed a distinguished career on the stage.

Louis Bortels is best known for his outstanding success in the title role of "The Show-Off" in the Gregory Kelly prize play of that name which ran for two consecutive seasons. Last year he played for 37 weeks in "Five O'Clock Girl." He has numerous screen roles to his credit.

Rita La Roy was borrowed from RKO for "Sin Takes a Holiday." She has recently appeared on the screen in "The Delightful Rogue" and "The Love Trap."

Zasu Pitts was specially engaged for "Sin Takes a Holiday." She is perhaps one of the most popular comedians on the screen. John Roche played a leading role with Miss Bennett in "This Thing Called Love." He also played with Ina Claire in "The Awful Truth." Roche came to the screen after a legitimate stage career.

Fred Walton recently scored in "Dynamite" and "The Last Dance." His stage career is well known.

MARIE DRESSLER BECOMES BARBER

Shaves Wallace Beery in Opening Scenes of "Min and Bill"

Marie Dressler started her latest talkie role of stropping a razor and shaving a popular screen "beary." In the role of proprietress of a waterfront hotel, who is incidentally the "lady barber" on the side, Miss Dressler is depicted in the opening scenes of "Min and Bill" shaving Wallace Beery, who plays a fishing-barge captain.

A Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer make-up man coached her for a week in the fine art of shaving, but even then Beery didn't seem too confident that all was well until the scene was finished. However, Miss Dressler lathered and shaved him without mishap.

The picture, based on the widely-read Lenna Moon novel, "Dark Star," tells a dramatic story of the conflict between mother and foster mother over the happiness of a child and is reported to rise to an intense climax when the foster mother, portrayed by Miss Dressler, is driven to murder then murdered by a desperate situation. Most of the action is laid amidst the fisheries and was filmed on a location set constructed close by the actual canneries and fishing docks at Terminal Island, San Pedro.

Coming Here in Person

Karl Dane, motion picture celebrity, who will appear in person with his co-starring screen partner, George K. Arthur, at the Fox Appleton theatre Sunday, will arrive in the sister ship of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh's "Spirit of St. Louis" at the Whiting airport tomorrow morning.

The plane, owned by the Wadsworth Oil Co., is coming from Green Bay. It is scheduled to land at the airport here at 11:30 A. M. Val Zimmerman, vice president of Midwest Airways, Inc., of Milwaukee, will be in charge of the flight. Frank Ernst, famous Wisconsin aviator, will be the pilot.

Mr. Dane, who won fame as the

BRAND NEW RELEASE TO BE SHOWN HERE

"Viennese Nights" Recently Premiered in New York in Preview

"Viennese Nights," one of the very newest Warner Brothers pictures—so new in fact, that its New York release is said to have just taken place on Dec. 24, to be exact—will start at the Appleton Theatre Wednesday, and will also be seen in a midnight show tonight.

The manager of the Appleton theatre, F. M. Westfall, said today that the theatre hereafter will show an outstanding new release at the midnight show on Saturday. Hereafter the midnight shows have largely been revivals of pictures seen here on previous occasions. The outstanding picture of each week will be given a pre-view showing following the regular Sunday evening performance.

"Viennese Nights" boasts a notable cast, including Walter Pidgeon, Jean Hersholt, Louise Fazenda and Vivienne Segal. It is a romance said to be somewhat the same general type as "The Student Prince," although there is no especial resemblance between the plots.

The scenes are laid mainly, as one might guess from the title, in Vienna, Austria, and the plot seems to promise a welcome relief from stereotyped movie themes. Briefly, it is this—the daughter of a Viennese cobbler plays with a neighbor's son as a child, and the two become childhood sweethearts. They grow up, still loving each other.

The boy is determined to become a great composer, but his sweetheart lacks faith in his ability. They drift apart, he marries and she marries a wealthy army officer. In the meantime, the boy struggles on, still endeavoring to become a composer and at last succeeds in proving his triumphant genius. We won't ruin your enjoyment of the picture by telling more of it, but the main interest, of course, lies in the way this theme is carried out.

The picture is not a musical comedy, but is intended purely as a romance—there are, however, some fine orchestral effects incidental to the plot and to the composers' triumph. These are played, it is said by a 250 piece orchestra, and were composed by Sigmund Romberg. Oscar Hammerstein is the author of the play.

THRILLING WEST LIVES ON SCREEN

"The Border Legion" Presents Zane Grey Story at His Best

Richard Arlen, Jack Holt in Zane Grey's "The Border Legion," a big outdoor, all-talking picture... that's the action entertainment showing at the Elite theatre today and Sunday.

"The Border Legion" is Zane Grey at his best. It has swift, breath-taking action, hard riding, shooting from the hip and romance that brings a lump into the throat and a tear to the eyes. There is great suspense as Arlen, Holt and Stanley Field face each other with guns in their hands and fight it out, man to man, for the love of Fay Wray. There is comedy with that droll character of the S. S. Van Dine murder mysteries and "The Virginian," Eugene Pallette, leading the fun. There are magnificent vistas, gorgeous backgrounds, vast herds of cattle, horses by the hundreds—and always "The Border Legion," riding, joking, fighting, terrorizing.

"The Border Legion" with its stellar cast of lead and character players is, without doubt, one of the most ambitious and best of the Western outdoor talking films produced to date. "The Virginian," Paramount's first audible action drama of the outdoors, initiated a great series of Westerns, filled with entertainment and true to the old and new traditions of the scene. This picture is particularly noteworthy because it brings back to Zane Grey drama, the outstanding portrayal of Zane Grey roles of silent picture days, Jack Holt. His speaking voice is as virile as his action has always been.

This combination of Paramount, Zane Grey, Richard Arlen, Jack Holt and Fay Wray means virile, vivid, thrilling outdoor action.

Chapter 17
MILLIONS FOR LOVE

FANNY had one admirer whom she found less easy to manage than the others.

"We shall call him Frederick and he had sat on Fanny's left the night of her first dinner party. He was 21, handsome and lusty and spoiled, heir not to millions but to hundreds of millions. To Fanny he scarcely seemed more grown-up than Sheila, and she was far more patient with him than he deserved.

"One afternoon toward the end of her visit he was waiting for her when she and Juliette came in about 6, with half a dozen others. He announced accordingly:

"Have you?" said Juliette carelessly. "Then you must be ready for some tea." On this afternoon Frederick refused tea rather rudely, glowered steadily at Fanny while she drank hers and finally coaxed her into the hall on the pretext of saying good-by.

"Come in here a minute—I have a book to show you," he said, making for the library. As Fanny hesitated in the doorway, he caught her quickly in his arms, closed the door, held her and kissed her until Fanny thought she would suffocate.

"That's for keeping me waiting," he said coolly as he released her. Fanny tore the door open, faced him with flaming cheeks. "How does that make you feel?" taunted Frederick.

"It makes me feel perfectly silly. I've never felt so silly—an old married woman to be kissed by a boy."

"An old woman of 23," jeered Frederick. "By the way, there's lipstick on your cheek and your hair's a sight. Look here, Fanny, will you stay a minute? I promise not to shut the door."

"I will not promise anything," said Fanny indignantly. "You don't seem to realize, young man, that I am seriously offended."

"Rot," said Frederick. "No woman was ever seriously offended by being kissed."

"Little you know. But it's time I went home. You seem to forget that I have a husband and daughter."

"When are you going home?"

"Next week."

"I've a notion not to let you go."

"Don't be silly."

"Do you think I couldn't keep you—if I were sure I wanted you enough?"

"That's too ridiculous, Frederick, to be discussed. I'm going back to the others."

"Fanny, do you know how much money I have—and how much more I'm going to have?"

"No, and I don't want to be told."

"So much that I'm one of the kings of the world—or at least a grand duke—and I'll be a king. It's money that makes things these days money's the power. In past ages other things might have mattered, but not now. It's money that makes the wheels go round today. You're a fool if you don't know that."

"Even so, the time I went back to my other guests."

"If I were sure," said Frederick between set teeth. As Fanny made for the door he suddenly knelt and clasped her knees. "Fanny, for God's sake, make me want you. I haven't wanted anything, wanted it awfully, in my whole life. You can have me on your own terms—your own terms—if you'll just make me want you."

"Frederick dear—silly, foolish boy—do you realize that what you are saying—that it's insulting."

"I said at your own terms, and I mean it—I'll wait six months, till you get your divorce. Anything, anything you say."

Fanny heard someone coming, tore herself free at last of his hot hands and fled upstairs where Juliette later found her lying face down on the bed.

"What's happened?" asked Juliette, seating herself. "Has his sickness been making love to you?"

"Worse," said Fanny, and told her story.

"And it doesn't tempt you in the least?" asked Juliette curiously.

"Tempt me—that greedy, overgrown boy?"

"He's horribly spoiled, of course. Could one expect otherwise? But it's true what he said—his father is a sort of unofficial king; he'd be a king himself. And he's mad about you. I have not the slightest doubt that if you were the least clever about it he would marry you—make you one of the notable women of the world."

"Good Heavens, Juliette, I'm married already!"

"Of course, my Fanny. But a crown has just been laid at your feet—I insist upon a little decent appreciation, a modicum at least of excitement. It offends my sense of the fitness that you kick it aside—as if it were a horse collar."

"Fanny laughed, sat up on the bed and smoothed her dress and hair."

"Juliette, you really are Heaven-sent. How I shall ever endure life without you I cannot imagine. I suppose I ought to be a little more impressed. But even if I were free, I don't think I should want Frederick."

"Because you love David so much, or is it Sheila, the baby?"

"Both, I suppose. But leaving Sheila out of it—and even if I were in love with Frederick—I should still go back to David."

"It should judge," said Juliette, "that your affections would sway you far more than your sense of duty."

"I don't know that it's a sense of duty that would take me back to David—more that I couldn't do anything else. Look here, Juliette, you stick your marriage out under the most unpleasant circumstances. Why shouldn't you expect me to stick mine?"

"I married Alessandro with my eyes wide open. He had certain things I wanted, and I had what he wanted; so we struck a bargain. As long as he keeps his it hardly seems reasonable or decent not to keep mine."

"Do you call it reasonable or decent for him to leave you for his mistress while you were carrying his babies?"

"In Latin countries, my Fanny, sins of the flesh are taken less seriously. It could not be otherwise in a civilization where the marriages are purely practical and the family the first consideration. On the whole I should say that Alessandro has kept his bargain fairly acceptably. I rebelled at first—but that was his mother. I am wiser now."

"But Juliette, I'm agast. Don't you think a marriage for love is as binding as one purely material? Surely David and I made a bargain—higher bargain than yours and Alessandro's."

Juliette smiled.

"One makes such impossible promises when in love. But seriously, cherub, I am a Continental. I think the family should be paramount. Over here it is the individual who is important. I am interested in your reactions."

"I suppose."

"That's the truth of it is," said Fanny, "that David is so much a part of me that I can't even conceive of life without him. Once he said to me that if I died he would forget me as quickly as possible—that he'd have to forget me or go crazy. I was awfully hurt. No matter how much I suffered I should go into the world and forget David." Tears came to Fanny's eyes and Juliette reached over and patted her hand.

"That's the difference between men and women," she said.

"David and I have given each other what no one else could," Fanny explained. "We've had—exquisite moments. To forget him I'd have to root out all the most beautiful things in my life. Even if I were able to do that I don't think I'd be free—not if I wore a thousand crowns or married a thousand Frederick."

She pushed back her hair and sighed.

"Do you think, Juliette darling, that one's ever free of one's deeper memories?"

Hurrying back—tomorrow—to share the joys of her trip with David, Fanny finds him merely jealous.

GLIDER ATTACK MYSTERY

Police and members of the Dumfries Gliding Club of Dumfries, Scotland, have been searching for the man who wrecked their new glider, and to learn his motive. The machine had just been used for the first time and was placed in a garage over night. A strange man was seen to go into the building and the next morning the glider was found demolished.

Blue Streaks Scheduled To Meet Oshkosh Hockey Team Here

GAME IS FIRST TO BE PLAYED ON LOCAL RINK

Appleton Sextet Leads Valley With Victory Over Fond du Lac

HOCKEY STANDINGS

	W. L.	Pct.
Appleton	1 0	1.000
Oshkosh	1 1	.500
Fond du Lac	1 1	.500
Neenah	1 2	.333

SUNDAY'S GAMES

Oshkosh at Appleton.
Fond du Lac at Neenah.

APPLETON Blue Streak hockey team will bring its hockey wars back to Jones park rink Sunday afternoon providing Old Sol doesn't ruin the ice before playing time 2 o'clock, or the weatherman sends a snow storm that prohibits playing. Weather conditions Friday were not at all conducive to good ice and only a cold snap will permit play.

The Blue Streaks sit on top of the league to date, having played one game with Fond du Lac, and having chalked up a victory for their trouble. The score was 2 and 1 and showed great possibilities for the sextet. The team invaded Fondy with comparatively little practice and showed good individual play but poor team work.

Oshkosh boasts a great defense team due in part to the efforts of Hank Jensen of baseball fame and Mike Fallon. The two kept Neenah rubber chasers away from the goal last Sunday and when one of their mates shoved the rubber in the net they copped 1 and 0.

The Sawdust city six also has a good offensive team and makes no denial. Against Neenah, it gave the Neenah goal a great afternoon with rubber flying in a half dozen directions.

The Appleton squad will be composed of about 12 men. Among them are Bill Kelley, Joe Shields, Duckie Schultz, Percy Sharp, Kitty Kitzinger, Newland, Frankie Buss, Ed Davis, Eddie Helms, and Francis Rooney.

BIG 10 PRACTICE SEASON TO CLOSE

Basketball Teams Open Western Conference Schedule Next Week

Chicago—(P)—The big Ten will close its practice season basketball books tonight with two games, both of them in the Chicago Metropolitan area.

Northwestern, victorious in its four preparatory games, will play a return engagement with Notre Dame at Evanston, while Chicago's improved Maroons will entertain Ohio Wesleyan. Northwestern easily defeated the Irish three weeks ago at South Bend, running up a 44 to 23 count, and on its own floor, figures to win again tonight.

The Big Ten championship season will open Monday night at Champaign where Wisconsin will meet Illinois. Iowa will play a non-conference game with Drake at Des Moines.

A pair of barnstorming teams, North Dakota State and Rice Institute of Houston, Tex., ran into setbacks in the Midwest last night. Illinois Wesleyan squeezed out a 26 to 23 decision over North Dakota State, while De Paul walked Rice 45 to 23 at Chicago. Arkansas also found the going tough, taking a 37 to 21 beating from Butler at Indianapolis.

VETERAN CHICAGO SPORTS SCRIBE DIES

Chicago—(P)—Funeral services for Harry Hochstadter, one of the veterans among Chicago sport writers, will be held Monday.

Hochstadter, 31 for two years, died suddenly yesterday from a heart attack just after he had finished writing his daily column for the Chicago Evening Post. He made such a valiant fight against death that he became known among the sports writing fraternity throughout the country as "America's guest in heaven." Hochstadter was 43 years old. In recent years he devoted most of his writing to affairs of the prize ring and turf.

INDUSTRIAL LEAGUE TEAMS RESUME PLAY

Teams in the Y. M. C. A. Industrial league will get started on their regular schedules tonight after a couple of hibernations. Only Saturday games have been played in the league during the last two weeks. Wednesday games were declared off days.

Tonight games will begin at 7:30 and 8:30 as usual. The coated Paper company is scheduled to meet the Y. M. C. A. Bears in the opener, and the United Cigars will clash with the Bankers in the second game.

THOROUGHBREDS DIE IN NEW ORLEANS FIRE

New Orleans—(P)—Four thoroughbreds were burned to death early today at the fair grounds race plant which opened for the new racing season on New year's day.

Mrs. J. W. Thomas, asleep in her residence near the track, was aroused by a dog's continuous barking and looked out to see flames licking at the roof of barn eight, opposite the three-quarter pole on the track.

The racers lost were Little Minister, Rusticate and Ballet On, the three owned by W. H. Fizer's stable, and a fourth horse, Honey Grove.

BRUSHING UP SPORTS ... By Laufer

Chaff'n Chatter

By Gordon R. McIntyre

JOHN SCHNELLER, Neenah, isn't a member of the University of Wisconsin basketball squad because he needs to spend his extra time on the books. That, the big fellow said yesterday, is his reason for not cavorting the courts for Doc Meanwell. He admits that he was advised by Coach Glen Thistlethwaite that two major sports would not be the best for him and in view of a little difficulty with standings he has abandoned caging until such time that he becomes positive he can do both.

Schneller likes to play basketball, he admits, and is having a pretty tough time staying off the hardwoods. If things look pretty good when he returns to school he may gladden the little Doctor's heart by turning out for the squad.

Marquette's win over Wisconsin the other evening has the boys guessing. The Hilltoppers hadn't looked so hot before the victory over the Badgers and except for Badrunas didn't look too bad. Badrunas is a big fellow and Tuesday played center and kept the ball in Marquette's hands through most of the game. He again proved the point that a big man at center offsets almost all other features a coach may work on in devising a winning team. Something like that point after touchdown that wrecks so many grid hopes—and coaches.

Who says there isn't a dull season in sports. The boys are trying to get Jack Dempsey back in the ring.

"One more New Year's resolution. From now on and henceforth we won't bat a plugged penny on a football game. We're sticking to fighters and baseball."

Wally Berger of Boston served one year in the majors and now is a holdout. Some boys learn terribly fast.

Some of the boys are kicking about Frank Murray's plan to put the goal posts 2 yards back of the goal line. His argument being that it would give the offensive team the same opportunity it has in midfield and would not permit the defensive team to concentrate its strength on the line of scrimmage and immediately back of it.

These same boys are getting out their best sarcasm and pouring it forth in great quantities, asking for round footballs which probably would permit ends to wear first baseman's gloves, etc.

Personally we favor the rule. It doesn't seem fair that a team should work all the way down the field with the ball and then, because the defensive eleven can concentrate its strength as the objective is reached be forced to lose its great advantage. No other sport handicaps a team when it reaches scoring distance. Imagine moving the fences back to give fielders a better chance to catch the ball when Babe Ruth comes to bat.

The boys who guess at the winners in the Valley conference basketball race are still picking Oshkosh to cop the title pointing out that the Sawdust city team has a flock of veterans back in school and has Seibold, a big fellow, playing center. Appleton and Marinette are picked as contenders, Fond du Lac as a surprise aggregation and the rest of the boys as also rans. The contest meets the Oshkosh quintet at Oshkosh, Jan. 21, and Feb. 13 at the armory. The Orange does not meet Fond du Lac or East Green Bay this year.

As far as we're concerned we are sticking with Appleton until it gets knocked out of the race. The Orange should not be afraid of big teams for it has been battling almost every size basketball player that Coach Shields can pick up, even the coffee boys. That will give the boys plenty of confidence in their ability and a couple of wins even with a little experience should not bother them.

WILLIE KLEIN SEEKS MIAMI OPEN TITLE

Gene Sarazen, Titlist for Last Three Years, Not Defending Honors

Miami, Fla.—(P)—Bent upon recapturing the crown he lost to Gene Sarazen four years ago, Willie Klein, Wheatley Hills, N. Y., was in a three-way tie for the lead today at the start of the second 18 holes of the 72-hole Miami open golf championship.

Sarazen, who took first honors in 1923, 1929 and 1930 after toppling Klein, is not defending the title this year.

Robert L. Gray, 21-year-old sharpshooter from Pearl Beach, Mich., and Joe Turnesa, Elmsford, N. Y., professional, were deadlocked with Klein. Each had 738, par figures for the municipally-owned Miami Springs course. Immediately behind were bunched 11 of the 111 entrants each with scores of 74.

Johnny Farrell, former national open champion, and the veteran Jack Hutchinson of Chicago and Nassau, Laurie Arton, Chicago, Eddie Williams, Cleveland, and Mike Turnesa, Elmsford, were among those scoring 74.

MISSISSIPPI LEAGUE PREXY WILL RETIRE

Cedar Rapids, Iowa—(P)—Belden Hill, president of the Mississippi valley league for the past seven years, had decided to retire from baseball after having been identified with the game for 43 years. Hill announced today he would not be a candidate for reelection at the annual meeting here Jan. 20.

CHICAGO BRUINS SELL CENTER TO BROOKLYN

Chicago—(P)—Pat Hendley, veteran professional basketball center, has been sold by the Chicago Bruins to the Brooklyn Visitation and will play with the latter club tonight against the Bruins. Charlie Murphy, former Loyola star, will be at center for Chicago.

GOLF PROS GATHER AT SANTA MONICA FOR NEXT TOURNAMENT

Southern California's Second Meet Attracts Many National Stars

SANTA MONICA, CALIF.—(P)—Southern California's second winter golf tournament gets underway here today with the Santa Monica "18-hole" amateur-pro "best hole" championship providing $1,500 prize money.

The tournament attracted more than 250 entries with half the field teeing off today and the remainder tomorrow. The play will call into action most of the country's leading professionals and several prominent amateurs, who will get their third chance in tournament play at the "balloon" ball.

Of the leading teams scheduled to start today are Tommy Armour, P. G. A. champion from Detroit, and Everett Seaver, father of Charles Seaver, semi-finalist in the national amateur tournament last fall; Walter Hagen, Detroit, and Roland McKenzie, Washington, D. C., amateur; George Von Elm, Los Angeles pro and Howard Hughes, also of Los Angeles; Harry Cooper, Chicago, pro, and Johnny Dawson, Chicago's outstanding amateur. Leo Diegel, Agua Caliente, has reserved a starting time today but has not named his partner.

Sunday's list includes Tony Manero, New York, winner of the recent Pasadena $5,500 open, paired with Bill Jelliffe, Los Angeles amateur champion; Horton Smith, New York, and George Shaw, local expert; Craig Wood, Bloomfield, N. J., and John DePaolo; Al Espinosa, Chicago, and Danny Sangster; and Charles Lacey, New York, and John De Forest, English amateur.

Two baseball players will be among the amateurs Sunday, Floyd "Babe" Herman, Brooklyn's heavy

Entries For State Bowling Tournament Close Jan. 9

BY WM. F. FENSKE

INDICATIONS point to a very successful state tournament judging from the great number of entries from outside of the city of Milwaukee and it looks as though the state cities are determined to make good their promises a year ago giving the metropolis of their state full support.

Madison, Racine, Kenosha, Oshkosh and Sheboygan have from 25 to 30 teams already on the books and it is very gratifying. Green Bay and Beloit with 20 each look fine and it seems as though the winning of the two men international championships at Cleveland by Gerry Hays and Jimmy Devine of Beloit stimulated the interest in the game in southern Wisconsin.

Waukegan has become a real hotbed of bowling with its county league and teams from Shawano, New London, Clintonville, Waukegan, and probably Waukegan, will have at least 20 teams when the curtain drops on the entry list on Jan. 2. This is good news from Waukegan where the potatoes grow and the fishing is good.

Neenah, Manitowish and Fond du Lac have 15 now on the books and probably will have ten more from each one. Portage, Waubesa, Kohler, LaCrosse, Menasha, Appleton, and Janesville are right in line with ten each and a few others like Plymouth, Watertown, Stevens Point, Eau Claire, Sturgeon Bay, Monroe, Bar-

ST. LOUIS MUST STRENGTHEN ITS HURLING STAFF

Has Acquired Many Young Pitchers; Most of Veteran Staff Returns

BY JOHN B. FOSTER

Copyright 1931

NEW YORK—(CPA)—To make a successful fight to hold the championship of the National league in 1931, the St. Louis Cardinals must have good pitching. St. Louis knows it. It has all of its pitchers of 1930, except Herman Bell, and it has added some more.

A new one is Stout who has been in the St. Louis chain since he got away from a high school team in Webster Grove, Mo. He has pitched for Fort Smith, Syracuse, Danville and Houston. He was with the latter city in 1929 and the St. Louis manager thinks it is time to ascertain whether he is good enough for the big club. If he is not, probably he will return to the Branch Rickey necktie.

Derflinger is another. He pitched for Rochester last year and he showed stamina and grit when he was needed. He won 23 games and lost 11. That is a great record—even if it is a minor league record—for these days. In the little world series played against Louisville at the close of the season Derflinger was skilful and a staunch pitcher. If he has arrived at the major stage of his career he will be a regular for St. Louis in the coming season.

Dean, better known as Dizzy Dean, and with a Dizzy and a Dizzy in the National league in 1931, it may become a two-way pitcher for Houston last year and was taken over before the season ended. The Cardinals tried him out against Pittsburgh toward the end of the season and he held the Pirates to one run. Dizzy played on a soldier team in 1929 and he was such a wild cat that a St. Louis scout brought him down.

The foregoing are the new pitchers who will be used by the champions this year, and perhaps they will pick up two or three more young ones to put out in the spring training camp. The old timers of the card's staff—Haines, Grimes, Hallahan, Lindsey, Rhom and Johnson—have been well-fortified with this new material and, barring injuries, should hold the team well in the race.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

New York—Pierre Charles, Belgium, outpointed Jack Renault, Canada (10); Ralph Piccuello, New York, knocked out Johnny Grosso, Mt. Vernon, N. Y. (3); Tony Galante, Orange, N. J., knocked out Phil Mercurio, New Rochelle, (2); Ad Warren, Chapel Hill, N. C., and Ernest Guhring, Germany, drew (10).

St. Louis—Eddie Shear, Chicago, knocked out Andy Martin, Boston (2); Bushy Graham, Utica, N. Y., outpointed Davey Abad, Panama (3); Tommy Grogan, Omaha, outpointed Eddie Ran, Poland (3); Jackie Brady, Syracuse, N. Y., technically knocked out Joey Medill, Chicago (5); Mickey Cohen, Denver, and Mike Dundee, Rock Island, drew (3).

Pittsburg—Young Rudy, Charleroi, Pa., knocked out Billy Bully, Mt. Clemens, Mich. (2).

SPEED PLANE BOAT

Glen Cove, L. I.—Max Colen has designed a model of a plane-boat which, he contends will make a trans-Atlantic hop in 30 hours. His boat will be 750 feet long and will be powered by four Diesel engines operating huge propellers. It will travel at a speed which will cause it to rise just above the tops of waves.

Football "Overemphasized" Humor Of Game For Irish

BY LAWRENCE PERRY

Copyright 1930

NEW YORK—(CPA)—One thing that football always over-emphasizes is the humor of the game. And a very agreeable sort of over-emphasis it is. The minute your football player becomes an old grad he forgets the hard knocks, the scrimmages and games, forgets any bad feeling toward anyone that may have been engendered in bitter contests. He remembers only the laughs.

Anal, taking cue from Knute Rockne, no old grads get more fun out of gridiron retrospect than Notre Dame players. At a meeting of the New Jersey Notre Dame alumni in Newark there were present a number of former South Bend luminaries who had taken part in that now historic game against the New York Giants. As is pretty generally known, the Giants have a fine everyman of which does not weigh under two hundred pounds.

Sleepy Crowley in telling of the game said that John Law looked at that forward wall of behemoths as they lined up for the kick-off and as soon as the kick was made he rushed up to the referee.

"Can you tell me," he asked, "how much more time there is to play?" On one play, the Giants having the ball, Nobel Kiser whispered to Adam Walsh.

"I'm going to pull out on this play and take the inside back on forward pass defense. So cover me in here." "What, and leave me in here all alone?" cried Walsh. So when the play came he followed Cannon and Cannon went to the sidelines. Walsh is a good runner but he never caught up with Cannon.

Crowley lasted seven minutes and then was tackled hard. He did not arise. "Why," said the referee, "only two men hit you." "Yes," said Crowley, "but I didn't think they were going to come onto me from the roof of the grandstand."

Walsh's passes, Crowley said, used to be great in the four horsemen days; nice fluffy ones, as Rockne puts it. But in the game against the Giants the four horsemen had to play the part of first basemen in taking Adam's passes high out of the air or off the ground.

"You were lucky to get the ball at all," retorted Walsh, "what with a lot of California redwoods falling on men every play."

Crowley said that after a few minutes of that game the four horsemen stalled on every play by saying four or five "hail Marys" in the huddle; but that after a while they could not do any better than the "amen."

Bucky O'Connor, the fullback sensation of the Southern California game, was at this Notre Dame foregathering. And what a bro of a boy he is. O'Connor worked three years on the South worked hard and studied hard—he is a fine scholar—before his big chance came. And today he is the ideal, the example and the idol of every school boy in New Jersey and elsewhere. Is that sort of over-emphasis in football bad for the youth of this nation? We ask you.

Sports Question Box

Question—Pitcher is on his plate and the wind up has begun. Suddenly the umpire calls "Time." I say he has no right to do that. He cannot call "Time" until after the ball has been delivered.

Answer—You are wrong. He may have a very good reason for calling time and the pitcher is not charged with a balk if he does.

Question—Are coil exercisers made of steel beneficial to a boxer in developing a punch?

Answer—No. A boxer would do well to avoid such exercises as they tend to bind his muscles. Punching can only be developed by getting the right knack by punching the heavy bag or in actual training setts.

Question—How many Tourney of Roses games has Alabama played?

Answer—Two. She beat Washington and tied Stanford.

VALLEY SPORTS STARS RETURN TO SETON HALL

Fox River valley sports stars attending Seton Hall at Orange, N. J. packed with extra shirts and socks Friday morning and began the trip back east. The boys are Bobby and Karl Knut, Norbert Berg, Myron Ester, Kaukauna, John Shekore, Gree, Bay, and Harvey Winters. Richard "Red" Smith, Combined Locks, is athletic director out there and Dan Steinberg, Jr., the basketball coach.

Lakeview, Fla.—Charlie Von Reeden, New York, outpointed Harry Atherton, Indianapolis (10).

SPECIALS DEFEAT SOPH TRIANGLES

Older Boy League Game Was One Postponed Last Saturday Afternoon

Sam Ornstein's Specials and the Soph Triangles played off an Older Boys basketball game postponed a week ago, Friday evening at the association gym. Sam's team triumphed by a score of 12 and 4 and is undefeated in the league.

The specials presented a strong defense throughout the game and at the end of the first half the score was 5 and 2 in their favor. During the second half they annexed seven points while the Sophs were getting three.

PRODUCTION AND VALUE OF CHEESE SHOWS INCREASE

574,412,948 Pounds Manufactured in U. S. in 1929

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Wash. Bureau)
Washington—The moon—made of green cheese—must have looked down with pleasure on the great increase in production and value of its basic commodity in the United States during the two years from 1927 to 1929.

The green cheese may have come from Wisconsin—most of the other cheese did.

According to the statistics gathered in the 1930 Census of Manufactures and made public today, 574,412,948 pounds of cheese were manufactured in the United States in 1929, an increase of 10.8 per cent compared with the 518,198,333 pounds produced in 1927, the last preceding census year. The 1929 value, $118,529,268, was an increase of 3.1 per cent over the 1927 value of $110,151,258.

Of these totals, 364,657,021 pounds valued at $75,574,671 were American cheese; 59,124,703 pounds valued at $12,336,017 were Swiss (block), brick, Munster and Limburger; 30,784,512 pounds worth $8,044,963 were cream and Neufchatel; 5,509,621 pounds worth $1,313,786 were Italian; 80,709,362 pounds valued at $7,107,439 were cottage, pot and bakers' cheese and 33,627,399 pounds worth $9,155,642 were other varieties.

These figures indicate increases of 2.5 per cent in the production of American and Swiss cheeses, 16.5 per cent in production and 0.8 per cent in value of cream and Neufchatel, 23.3 per cent in production and 30.9 per cent in value of Italian cheese; 17.4 per cent in production and 25.6 per cent in value of cottage, pot and bakers' cheese; and 49.4 per cent in production and 43.7 per cent in value of other varieties. The only decrease registered was 6.1 per cent in the value of American and Swiss cheeses combined.

Of the total production of cheese in 1929, 512,677,677 pounds valued at $105,762,948 were manufactured in the cheese industry proper while 61,735,271 pounds valued at $7,350,320 were produced as secondary products of other industries. This was an increase of 9.6 per cent in production and 1.5 per cent in value over the 1927 records in the cheese industry and an increase of 22.9 per cent in production and 27.6 per cent in value over 1927 outside the industry.

In the cheese industry decreases were recorded in the number of establishments, average yearly number of wage earners, wages paid and a decrease in the total value of products brought about by a tremendous decline in the value of products other than cheese.

In 1929, there were 2,609 cheese manufacturing establishments in the United States, a decrease of 1.4 per cent compared with the 2,738 operating in 1927. The average number of wage earners sank by 5.5 per cent during the two years, going from 3,520 in 1927 to 3,328 in 1929, while wages paid decreased by 9.7 per cent from $4,897,205 in 1927 to $4,417,703 in 1929.

A decrease of 21.8 per cent in the value of other products of the industry, brought the total value of all products down.

WOOD PULP VALUE AND QUANTITY IS INCREASED IN '29

Number of Establishments and Wage Earners Drops, However

BY RUBY A. BLACK
(Post-Crescent Wash. Bureau)

Washington—Despite decreases in the number of establishments in the industry and the average number of wage earners, the quantity and value of wood pulp manufactured in 1929 were greater than in 1927, according to statistics obtained by the 1930 census of manufactures.

In 1929, 7,437,400 cords of wood were consumed in producing 4,770,600 tons of wood pulp valued at $234,824,000. This was an increase of 7.6 per cent over the value of $218,198,201 reported for 1927, the last preceding census year. The quantity produced in 1928 was 4,510,800 tons and in 1927, 4,313,403 tons.

The 1929 total was made up of wood pulp valued at $218,058, other pulp valued at $118,000; and other products of the pulp factories valued at $5,866,000.

A decrease of 13.7 per cent in the number of establishments manufacturing wood pulp was recorded during the two-year period, going from 219 in 1927 to 189 in 1929. In 1929, 24,333 wage earners were given employment in these factories and were paid $21,964,000 in wages. This is a decrease of 1.7 per cent in number of workers but an increase of 1.4 per cent in wages over 1927.

Increases were recorded in 1929 in the amount of wood pulp manufactured mechanically, by sulphite process, sulphate, soda, semichemically and by screening.

Increases were shown in the amount of domestic spruce, southern yellow pine, domestic poplar, domestic balsam fir, jack pine, yellow poplar, domestic beech, birch and maple used in manufacture of wood pulp. Decreases were reported in quantities of imported spruce, hemlock, balsam fir and poplar, white fir, gum and tamarack (larch) used. Slabs and mill waste were used in greater quantity, going from 286,084 cords in 1927, to 455,665 cords in 1928 and on up to 545,800 cords in 1929.

HOW'S IT DONE?

Paris—In contrast with conditions in other countries, there is little unemployment in France. Labor conditions here, in fact, are such that foreign labor is being imported to meet the demands of many industries. A new social insurance law has been passed providing for compulsory insurance for French workers earning less than 15,000 francs annually.

COUNTRY IN NEED OF BANK RELIEF, BABSON DECLARES

Frozen Assets of Most Banks Will Be Good in Time, He Says

Babson Park, Florida—This country needs most right now "bank relief." Farm relief, unemployment relief would be less necessary, if we could stop this epidemic of bank failures. When a bank closes its doors, the whole community suffers. Money ceases circulating, business funds are tied up, men are thrown out of employment, savings are lost, and purchases are stopped. The pity of it is that most of these bank closings are now due to temporary causes and, under normal conditions the closing would be unnecessary. Many independent banks and their loans temporarily frozen due to the abnormal decline in prices for bonds, wheat, cotton, land, etc. Such loans, in most cases, will be perfectly good if given time. Prices always recover from the extreme lows and as they recover, frozen loans will thaw out. It is a shame to those banks which have been honestly run as 90 per cent of these country banks have been, simply because quotations are temporarily low.

Although these Eskimo banks are now covered with snow and fastened with icicles in this winter of depression, most of them—if given a chance—will emerge vigorous and active when the springtime of improving business again melts the abnormal prices. It is up to every community to give support and encouragement to its local banks in these times of stress. To let them freeze to death by a withdrawal of deposits is simply cutting away the foundation of returning good business in the community. The small independent bank is a very important institution and, in the great majority of cases, every community as poorer when any bank—however small—is allowed to close its doors.

Local Groups Can Help
If the present failures were few in number, there would be no reason for this appeal on behalf of these country banks. However, when we find that over 1,000 banks with one million depositors close their doors during the past year, we see why abnormal prices, business pessimism, and the lack of public confidence is rampant. The sum's truth is that 1930 has shown more banks closing than any year in the past century. If we keep closing banks at the current rate of three a day, the recovery of general business and security prices will be greatly retarded because every one of these million depositors becomes a pessimist of the worst sort. There are ways in which every citizen can help the situation. First, we can avoid spreading rumors and we can rebuke the scandal-monger. What would happen if the bank officials, like many thoughtful citizens, listened to every rumor about bank customers who are borrowing from them? A man who helps to start a run on a bank, or repeats any rumor about a bank, is not only a very foolish citizen, but also a very bad citizen.

Let the Chambers of Commerce, Boards of Trade, Rotary Clubs, Kiwanis Clubs, and other organizations in every community form vigilance committees to spike every malicious rumor about its banks, and to make a business and social outcast of the tale-bearer. Remember "that the strongest bank in the United States depends for its strength on the confidence of its depositors. There is not a single bank in the country that could stand up a week, if its depositors suddenly lost confidence in it. Not only today, but at all times, confidence is the foundation upon which every bank must stand. How much more, therefore, during this temporary period of stress should every citizen guard the good name of every bank and be alert to denounce its defamers.

Study Problem
To be sure, most of the failures are of small banks, chiefly in the South and West, and mostly non-members of the Federal Reserve System. However, their correspondents, in which they deposit, are members of the Federal Reserve System. While the Federal Reserve Act was never intended to save any bank from failing which ought to fail because of mismanagement or hopeless insolvency, nevertheless, banking officials should work out some plan to prevent the wholesale failures that are now occurring. In the old days, before the Federal Reserve Act, the Clearing House used to issue certificates against unsalable collateral offered by member banks of Clearing House Associations. This helped to prevent the failure of members temporarily embarrassed by business depression. They did this in the depressions of 1873, 1893, 1907, and at other less critical periods. The Federal Reserve Act carried this idea further by providing for expansion of currency by issuance of Federal Reserve Notes against certain collateral of the member banks. The Federal Reserve Act, however, made no provision for giving direct help to non-member banks or for nursing along banks with unsalable assets. Cannot some means be devised which will give relief to sound independent country banks in

Slack Demand For Steel Sure Sign Of Recovery

When steel production declined to 37 per cent of capacity early in December it gave one of industry's most certain signals of approaching recovery. In the past when steel activities have dropped so far improvement has not been long delayed.

This is not difficult to understand when it is remembered that steel producing capacity has been built up in step with the living standards of America's population—now 124,000,000 people. Any violent deviation of steel mill operations from normal means that the ordinary requirements of the country are not being met.

Steel output was so low in December that if continued for a full year at the same rate it would amount to only 25,000,000 tons. The average over the last 10 years was 41,000,000 tons annually.

There has been no correspondingly drastic reduction in the rate that steel, and the products of steel, are being used up and worn out. In other words, steel production is in arrears of current needs. A wholesome deferred demand is being accumulated, a fact which is laying the basis for revival.

Improvement in sentiment in the steel industry has come from the recent advance of finished steel prices by $1 a ton. The increase was small, but it was encouraging in that it has brought stability out of extreme unsettlement. For all of 1930 the output of steel was approximately 40,000,000 tons against 54,000,000 tons in 1929.

PAPER PRODUCTS EXPORTS DECLINE

Drop of About 20 Per Cent Below 1929 Level Is Anticipated

BY RUBY A. BLACK
Post-Crescent Wash. Corrs.

Washington—Exports of paper and paper products from the United States appear to have dropped in 1930 to about 20 per cent below the 1929 level, according to B. M. Frost of the Paper Division of the United States Department of Commerce.

They will nevertheless, equal, if not surpass, the average annual exports for the five years 1925-1929, if the exports of the first 11 months of 1930 can be taken as an index, Mr. Frost says.

The heaviest decreases were shown in printing and writing papers and paper boards. Exports of wrapping paper, except for paper bags, were higher in 1930 than in 1929, as were exports of tissue papers, toilet papers and paper towels and napkins.

Imports of paper and paper products were 10 per cent lower in 1930 than in 1929. The bulk of the imports consists of newsprint and receipts decreased 3 per cent.

During the first 11 months of this year, exports of paper and paper products reached a total value of $30,222,555 as against $33,948,261 during the first 11 months of 1929. The December exports were expected to bring the total to about $30,000,000, as compared with some $37,000,000 last year and $20,900,000 in 1928.

Such periods as this? The Federal Reserve System now has no power to help outside banks directly; but help is possible through the intercession of the correspondent banks. Surely member banks should be anxious to prevent any failure of any worthy bank within or outside of the system. State banking authorities should be very loathe to close any banks. All bankers and banking authorities should judge present business conditions in the light of the business cycle, and should stretch every point to give the honest run country bank time enough to work out of its frozen condition. Precipitate closing action—in a time like this—should be avoided in all cases.

Temporary Relief
When a man is sick the thing to do is to help him get well, and to save the "lecture" until he is strong enough for it to do him some good. It is undoubtedly true that many banks acted unwisely in the over-granting of loans in the preceding inflationary period. However, normal conditions most of such loans will again become perfectly good. Some banks made their mistake by forgetting just how far down prices and business can go in a severe depression. Conservative bankers and officials naturally frown upon such carelessness and now have little sympathy for the hapless victims. They should, however, remember that continued increase in bank failures cannot go on without affecting all institutions. It is not wholly a question of solvency, it is a question of deposits. There is a limit in deposit withdrawals facing every bank. The Federal Reserve System is in an extremely strong position. There is no real scarcity of money and credit, and the power will be a long time recovering if we do not do something to relieve the position and protect the depositors of the smaller banks.

Once this crisis is past the permanent cure must go still further. Business men in the community should see to it that their banks are operated more conservatively and are not allowed to compete too strenuously for deposits by offering too high rates of interest. There is no use talking about this at the present time, but the attempts of banks to pay out too much in interest and dividends is the cause of most troubles. Later as conditions improve, the local "vigilance committees" and the local business men should advise and urge their local banks to enter the Federal Reserve System. Traditionally, banks have always given advice and counsel to the business men of the community; but now the business men should take an active interest in the welfare and policies of their banks.

NEW YORK LIFE SAYS DEATHS FROM PNEUMONIA GROW

7.5 Per Cent for First 11 Months Shows No Marked Improvement

New York—(Special)—The number of deaths from pneumonia, one of the few communicable diseases thus far escaping medical control, may again reach a high total this winter, warns the New York Life Insurance Company which today reported its experience with this disease during the last 10 years.

In the first 11 months of this year, pneumonia was responsible for about 75 per cent of all deaths among policy-holders of the N. Y. Life Insurance Co., and was the fifth greatest cause of death, although this period does not include the unfavorable month of December.

This compares with a rate of 8.6 per cent for 1929 and 8.7 for 1921. Since the rates for this disease have shown a variance of not more than 14 per cent.

Carry Germs With Us

"Despite the advance in treatment made with the use of a serum injection, pneumonia remains one of the few communicable diseases which in the past 10 years has not shown a marked decrease in rate of mortality," states Dr. Ernest H. Lines, chief medical director of the New York Life Insurance Company. "Examination of the throat and nasal passages of healthy individuals shows that many of us carry with us, more or less constantly, the germs which cause pneumonia. When we are in good physical condition, the germs are held in check. But when there is a lowering of resistance from undue fatigue, worry, exposure to cold and wet, or from some bodily ailment, the germs have an opportunity to multiply and spread."

"This is the season of the year when most people work the hardest, and indulge in the wildest social activities. We do not get sufficient fresh air and sleep. The result is that we are lowering our resistance at the very time when we should be most on our guard to withstand the cold and dampness of winter weather."

"So it is that the common cold, sore throat, and other respiratory infections when contracted, are thrown off only with the greatest difficulty. And it is the common cold, probably more than any other single drain upon our vitality, which is responsible for the onset of pneumonia."

"Someday in the not distant future medical science will probably find a satisfactory preventive or cure for pneumonia. When one considers the extraordinary advances made in controlling smallpox, typhoid, yellow fever, leprosy, malaria, cholera, scarlet fever, diphtheria and many other communicable diseases, this seems a reasonable expectation."

"In the meantime it is up to every one of us to avoid a run-down condition and exposure which may lead to pneumonia, if we are to lessen the loss of life attributable to it."

This bulletin has been just received by Charles C. Baker and W. Frank McGowan for their company, The New York Life Insurance Co., which has been to the fore in its efforts to conserve human life, and to bring about an improvement in general health conditions in the communities it serves.

LANGUAGE ASSOCIATION MEETS IN WASHINGTON

(Post-Crescent Wash. Bureau)
Washington—Twenty-four Wisconsin members of the Modern Language Association attended the 47th meeting of that organization in the National Capital Dec. 29-31. A number of the Badger State representatives took part in the research group meetings and appeared on the programs of the convention. Harry Hayden Clark of the University of Wisconsin read a paper on "Emerson and Science" before a session on American Literature; Dorothy Bethurum of Lawrence College at Appleton spoke "Early On English Prose," especially touching on the "American" prose; and Professor Joaquin Ortega of the University of Wisconsin made a most interesting presentation of the results of research work on "Quevedo and the Gran Duque de Osuna" before the Romance Section Wednesday.

Miss Bethurum's paper was one of four discussed in great detail in the section of Old English literature. Each treated in some detail a point usually neglected in scholarship and was followed by general discussion. Alexander R. Hohlfield of the University of Wisconsin has been a member of the Executive Council of the M. L. A. but his term ended January 1, 1931.

LONGEST PHONE CALL IS MADE BY FORD EXECUTIVE

Official in Ontario, Canada, Talks Around World to Australia

The longest telephone call ever made inaugurated the new radio telephone service connecting Canada and Australia when Wallace R. Campbell, president of the Ford Motor Company of Canada, Ltd., talked from his desk in the company's plant at East Windsor, Ontario, to Hubert C. Grench managing director of the Ford Motor Company of Australia, Pty., Ltd., at his home in Geelong, Australia. The call was solely for business purposes. Beam radio signals and land wires carried the conversation over 16,820 miles, or the distance around the globe.

It was 9.15 a. m. in East Windsor and 12.15 a. m. the next day in Australia when a telephone company operator notified Mr. Campbell that connection had been effected. Through-out the call, which lasted nine minutes and thirty-five seconds, the two automobile executives discussed the affairs of the Australian Ford company with as little difficulty as if they had been talking over a few hundred miles of land wires.

METHOD IS EFFICIENT
So efficient was this new method of rapid communication that Mr. Campbell is planning to use the service regularly to keep more closely in touch with the affairs of the Australian company. Hitherto, only the cables have been available. A similar service is expected to become available soon which will enable Mr. Campbell to conduct business by radio telephone with the Ford associated companies in India, Malaya, and South Africa and the agency in New Zealand.

The call was routed over a great network of land telephone lines and four beam radio systems. From East Windsor, Mr. Campbell's voice was flashed by land lines to New York City and Rocky Point, Long Island. Thence it was transmitted by short wave radio to a receiving station at Rugby, England, where it was flashed by land lines to the British Post Office Station in London. From there, it was carried by beam radio to Sydney, Australia, and thence by land lines to Geelong.

The return circuit, separate from the first, carried Mr. Campbell's voice by land wires from Geelong to Sydney; thence by beam radio to London, by land lines to Cupar, Scotland, by beam radio to Holton, Maine, and thence by land wires through New York City to East Windsor. It was the most ambitious radio telephone circuit ever set up for a purely business call.

This progressive attitude in business is reflected in action by the August Brandt Co. of 300 W. College ave., representatives of the Ford Motor company in this city.

AMERICAN WATER WORKS NOW SELLS ELECTRIC POWER

Greater Part of Income, in Fact, Comes from This Source

BY GEORGE T. HUGHES
(Copyright, 1931, by Cons. Press)
(This is the eighth article of a series on the subject of public utilities, covering the principal operating and holding companies, giving their history, field of operations and an analysis of the capital structure. Mr. Hughes will discuss bonds as well as stocks but will present the facts without any attempt to recommend purchase or sale of specific securities.)

New York—Originally interested mainly in water supply service, American Water Works now derives the greater part of its income from the sale of electric light and power. It still controls the largest privately owned water works supply system and income from that source is stable but in recent years it has benefited from the rapid expansion of the electric industry. Like other large public utilities its gross and net income have been affected by the current business depression. Up to, and including April 1930 electric output in kilowatt hours was larger than the corresponding months of 1929 but since that time there has been a falling off. For the first nine months of 1930 gross revenues were up from those of 1929 but net was slightly lower.

Expressed in earnings per share the amount available for the $6 preferred during the first three quarters of the year was $36.17 against $37.24 in the preceding year. For the common stock the corresponding figures were $2.47 for 1930 and $3.60 for 1929. Fixed charges were covered during these nine months 147 times in 1930 and 131 times in 1929. This was a good showing considering the industrial situation.

The market price of the $6 preferred at this writing ranges around par. The common stock has long been a trading favorite on the New York Stock Exchange and its 1929 range has been over 75 points. In general the market is in the case with other utilities capitalizes earnings liberally. The subsidiaries of American Water Works have a large funded debt amounting to more than $160,000,000 and preferred stocks of more than $50,000,000 per value, interest and dividends on which come ahead of the interest on the bonds of the parent company and of the dividends on its stocks.

Bonds of the holding company consist of a short term issue maturing in 1934 selling to yield around 4 1/2 per cent and two long term debentures maturing in 1938, one with a 5 per cent coupon and one with a 5 1/2 per cent coupon selling to yield around 5 1/2 and 5 3/4 per cent respectively.
